ANTI-SEDITION BILL STIRS STRONG PROTEST

GANDHI TAKES NEW OFFICE

VACATING CONGRESS PRESIDENCY

TO GUIDE VILLAGE INDUSTRIES

SUCCESSOR NOT MENTIONED

Bombay, Oct. 28.

The Mahatma Gandhi tonight delivered his "swan song" as President of the Indian National Congress. He will retire to devote his attention to the All-India Village Industries' Association, just inaugurated.

Loud-speakers relayed his speech to the crowd of 80,000 who had gathered at this out-door meeting place in the hills. A sound film van recorded the clear, ringing words of the Mahatma, upon whom three flood-lights shed a hard, revealing radiance.

CONSTITUTION CHANGE.

He moved a resolution in favour of the changing of the constitution of the number of delegates to 2,000 which he considers a reasonable number. This move was agreed to by a large majority.

The Congress some time earlier had resolved to inaugurate the All-India Village Industries' Association under the guidance of Gandhi, who will apparently divide his time and attention between this body and the Spinners' Association. —Reuter.

SEEKS HONOUR IN DEATH

PERSIAN OFFICER'S SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Stockholm, Oct. 28.

The wounds of Lieut. Hadjkanli, the Persian officer in charge of a group of students studying in the laboratories at the Bofors munitions factory, who attempted to commit suicide yesterday by shooting himself, are not likely to prove fatal.

His attempt on his life was a protest against exaggerated reports in the Swedish press with regard to his treatment of his subordinates.

The Persian officer, General Insmail Khan Chafai, has arrived from Switzerland to investigate the circumstances of another suicide which occurred yesterday, that of the Persian, Knapikema. —Reuter.

ANTI-RED WAR NEAR CONCLUSION

Kiangsi On Road To Rehabilitation

Peking, Oct. 28.

Mr. W. H. Donald, formerly Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's British adviser, but now in the service of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, declared in an interview that under the wise leadership of the Generalissimo the province of Kiangsi was well on the road to rehabilitation with the Red menace gradually being dissipated. He believed that the long-drawn anti-Red campaign in Kiangsi could be concluded toward the end of this year. —Central News.

SEIZED PROPERTY RESTORED

Berlin, Oct. 28.

The text is published to-day of an agreement signed in Dublin by Mr. De Valera and the German Minister, by which property seized during the War will be restored to its German owners or their heirs, as far as possible.

The agreement provides that the Free State Government will release and where necessary transfer to the original German owners or persons deriving titles through them, property rights and interests originally belonging to them and now subject to the charge created by the Treaty of Versailles, as far as such property rights have not been liquidated or finally disposed of before September 1, 1929. —Reuter.

COTTON MILLS SEEK TAX REDUCTION

Shanghai, Oct. 29. The National Association of Chinese cotton mills held an urgent meeting yesterday for the purpose of passing a resolution expressing an objection to a proposed increase in the consolidated tax imposed on cotton yarns. A delegation is being sent to Nanking to submit a petition to the Government for the withdrawal of this increase. —Central News.

SLEPT CROSSING TIMOR SEA

BLOWN OUT OF COURSE

(Special to "Telegraph").

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1929. Received, October 29, 2.05 a.m.)

Port Darwin, Oct. 28.

"Flying is my lucky pastime," stated young James Melrose, the Australian aviator, only just out of his teens but a prominent entry in the England-Australia air derby, when he landed here to-day.

He had just completed a thrilling flight across the dangerous Timor Sea, during which he had been blown fifty miles out of his course and to the south-west of Darwin by cross winds.

Melrose said he mistook the coastline ahead for that in the vicinity of Darwin and continued for 200 miles before he realised his mistake and turned back.

OUT OF FUEL

Starved for fuel, the plane's engine stopped when Melrose was five miles out of Port Darwin.

He glided over that last five miles. When he landed on the aerodrome his petrol tanks were bone dry.

"I never expected to reach Port Darwin," he said, and added that he believed he must have slept while flying over the Timor Sea, and for that reason had not noticed the drift of his plane. —Reuter Special.

BRITISH LIBERTY AT STAKE?

WITHDRAWAL OF MEASURE URGED

OUTBURST IN TRAFALGAR SQ.

(Special to "Telegraph").

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1929. Received, October 29, 4.15 a.m.)

London, Oct. 28.

A crowd of 9,000 persons gathered in Trafalgar Square this afternoon and heard no less than 30 speakers, representing political parties, industrial, religious, pacifist and education societies, denounce the Government's Bill to strengthen the law against sedition.

A body of 500 police, many of whom were mounted, was on duty in the vicinity but the meeting was very orderly.

A resolution was passed condemning the Bill as a grave threat to the traditional liberties of the country and demanding the withdrawal of the measure.

The Labour member of Parliament, Mr. John McGovern, of Glasgow, made a geyat play of the most recent publication of Mr.

James Melrose, the young Australian aviator, who, because of petrol shortage, had to glide five miles into Port Darwin on his England-Australia flight.

Lloyd George's "War Memoirs" in which the former Prime Minister accused Earl Haig of squandering the lives of British soldiers at Passchendaele. —Reuter Special.

LABOUR RESENTMENT.

The measure to which objection is being taken is the Incitement to Disaffection Bill, which has come in for much criticism in Labour circles. The two main provisions are that it is an offence to possess certain books and documents, and that the police are given a general right of search.

The recent Labour Congress denounced the Bill in unmeasured terms, as also did the recent National Conference of Labour Women. At the latter gathering, Miss Susan Lawrence said when she read Mr. Baldwin's fine platitudes about liberty and his joy that Britain was not like certain people on the Continent, she found it hard to reconcile this love of democracy with one of the worst plots against democratic right that any British Government had sought to get away with.

RED THREATS AVERTED

Invaders Turn To Hunan Frontier

Canton, Oct. 29.

The latest report from the north Kwangtung front states that the main Red forces have withdrawn to the south of Nanking. They appear to be busily engaged in rehabilitating their position before making another attempt to invade Hunan, instead of Kwangtung.

The Red menace on the Kwangtung border has been definitely averted following a series of heavy counter attacks launched by the Government troops in the past two days. —Central.

Washington, Oct. 27.

In connection with the drive to strengthen the personnel of the American Army and to add to its efficiency, it is learned to-day that nearly 400 army officers have retired voluntarily or due to age or physical disability since June 1, this year.

The retiring officers include 67 colonels, 39 lieutenant-colonels, 89 majors, 145 captains, 32 first lieutenants and six second lieutenants, thereby making possible numerous promotions all down the list.

The elimination process is continuing. —United Press.

U. S. BUSINESS OUTLOOK

ONLY MODERATE IMPROVEMENT

Washington, Oct. 28.

Observers here report that the U.S. Government expects only a very moderate improvement in business during the next four months.

Commodity prices may temporarily ease off, with adjustments between different groups. Only small average increases in agricultural prices, with erratic fluctuations, are expected.

Private loans for home modernization under the Federal Housing Administration are running about $2,500,000 weekly.

Overwhelming Democratic majorities in the House of Representatives and Senate are indicated.

Apparently there will be no reason for any burst of business enthusiasm following the elections. —Swan, Cubertson and Frits.

KING OF SIAM'S ULTIMATUM

URGED TO RECONSIDER ABDICATION

POLITICAL BREACH EXPLAINED

MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

London, Oct. 28.

The Government of Siam has requested the King to reconsider his decision to abdicate.

The King of Siam has clarified the position within his kingdom which brought about his offer to abdicate, and through his secretary has issued a statement in which he emphasises that the fight for Royal Prerogative, in regard to the commuting of the death sentence, is really a fight for the principles of democratic government.

As a majority of the elected members of the Assembly voted against the measure curtailing the King's Prerogative, the King feels he is basing his refusal to sign away his prerogative directly upon the will of the majority of his people, who, he feels, do not desire any change in the present position.

The King's announcement of his intention to abdicate is thus in the nature of an ultimatum to the Government, which could avoid this step by dropping the measure entirely or submitting it to plebiscite or general election.

DECISION MADE DAYS AGO.

Up to the present the negotiations between the King and the Government have not been carried out by direct means, but through the King's Regent at Bangkok, to whom about ten days ago the King expressed his intention of abdicating.

As soon as the King's decision was made known to the Government, a message was transmitted to His Majesty from that body, and through the Regent, pressing that the decision to abdicate be reconsidered.

COUNTRY PEACEFUL.

It is learned from the King's estate in Cranleigh, Surrey, where the monarch is residing, that no reports of any trouble of revolution in Siam have been received by the Royal Household following the King's announcement of his intention to abdicate.

The only request that the King should consider his decision came from the Siamese Government. No independent request was received from the army or any similar independent quarter. —Reuter.

UNWRITTEN LAW PUT TO TEST

CALIFORNIA HONOUR SLAYING TRIAL

HUSBAND ADMITS MURDER

(Special to "Telegraph").

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1929. Received, October 29, 11.05 a.m.)

Woodland, Cal., Oct. 27.

Judson Duke, war veteran and civic official of San Leandro, Cal., accused of first degree murder following the shooting of Lamar Hollingshead, 23, University of California sophomore and poet, goes on trial for his life here to-morrow. A jury of farmers is expected to balance the West's own "unwritten law" against the ancient decree of Moses that has been retained in the California statutes.

The California law preserves the old "eye for an eye" principle in cases of murder without extenuating circumstances attaching. The newer "law of the West" provides "death for dishonour," makes a husband prosecutor, judge and executioner if any man shall lead his wife to unfaithfulness.

Duke admits that he put his pistol in one pocket and a bundle of love letters in the other and drove to the farm where Hollingshead worked. He shot the student poet.

This happened on July 27 last, and Duke surrendered himself to two police immediately.

Mrs. Duke wished to remain out of the case altogether. The defence has summoned her, however. It has been revealed that Mrs. Duke visited her accused husband secretly in the jail here recently but it is denied that a reconciliation has been effected. —United Press.

Advance Contracts for British Films

KORDA CAMPAIGN

The autumn sales campaign for this year's roster of London Film Productions, which has just been completed, reveals that 10,000 contracts have already been secured in advance on such films as H. G. Wells' "Whither Mankind," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" (Loelle Howard), "Sanders of the River" (Edgar Wallace story), and "The Private Life of Don Juan" (Douglas Fairbanks).

For each of these pictures contracts have been secured with over 5,000 cinemas in the United States, over 1,000 in France, 700 in Germany, 400 in Italy, and over 200 in Belgium.

Further play dates have also been secured for about 600 cinemas in South Africa, 200 in Canada, 150 in Austria, 100 in Hungary, 200 in Czechoslovakia, 300 in Spain and Portugal, 100 in Holland, over 200 in the Scandinavian countries, 100 in Poland, and 80 in Yugoslavia for each of the films mentioned.

It is revealed that this is the first occasion on which a block of British pictures has been sold before completion to so many thousands of cinemas in foreign territories.

The pictures mentioned will be screened in almost every foreign capital in their original English versions, explanatory sub-titles being printed on the film in the language of the particular country showing the picture. The pictures are also "dubbed" so that the countries receive the pictures in their own language in place of the English dialogue. The four pictures mentioned will be "dubbed" in Spanish, French, German and Italian.

H. G. WELLS FILM.

John Barrymore, the famous American stage and screen actor, has been engaged for the leading part in the first original film story written by Mr. H. G. Wells.

The story, "Whither Humanity?" deals with the future in Mr. Wells's own imaginative way, and has already been in preparation for some months with "trick" camera work by Hollywood expert, in a British studio.

It is being produced by Alexander Korda for London Film Productions, and Mr. Wells is taking an active interest in its progress.

Mr. Barrymore, who arrived in London last weekend, has not appeared in a British film before, but some years ago made some scenes on the Thames Embankment when he appeared as Sherlock Holmes.

FILMLAND'S NEW RECRUIT.

Mr. Winston Churchill is writing for the screen.

He has just signed a contract with Alexander Korda's company, London Film Productions, to edit a series of films of topical interest.

The topics already selected provisionally by Mr. Churchill include:—"Will Monarchies Return?" "The Rise of Japan," "Marriage Laws and Customs," "The Family," and "Gold."

They are to be presented by a special staff of experts, and Mr. Churchill's ideas as to their screen treatment are to be followed as closely as possible.

FRECKLES NOT FEASIBLE.

"Anne of Green Gables" will go to the screen minus the freckles which were one of her characteristics in the novel by L. M. Montgomery.

BEAUTY CULTURE

ALTHOUGH vast sums of money are spent every year upon beauty culture, and there must be thousands and thousands of women who attend regularly at beauty parlours, yet the vast majority do not give much time or thought to make-up.

Old-fashioned women still consider it "fast" to use rouge or lipstick, to have the eyebrows plucked, and the finger-nails coloured. The modern girl, however, does these things as if they were all in the day's work, and she feels unnatural when she is not made-up.

Care of the skin and hair, the eyes, teeth, and hands, is really a duty for the woman who is well-groomed and as nice-looking as she can make herself, succeeds better in the business world than the tramp; while if she is a homemaker she owes it to her family to make herself as attractive as possible.

Beauty preparations are numerous and excellent, but the old preparations used by our great-grandmothers are as valuable as ever. Milk, honey, white of egg, lemon and tomato juice, can all be used with wonderful success in the care of the skin. To counteract the cold winds of autumn, and to prevent redness, warm milk is excellent. It is well to start using it before the very cold weather sets in.

For a sensitive skin, cocoa butter will smooth away roughness, and will leave the skin soft and velvety. It should be gently massaged into the skin from time to time. A good remedy for wrinkles and a sagging skin is an egg mask, for, while it acts as an astringent, it also tightens and tones up the muscles and stimulates the tissues. The white of an egg should be whisked to a stiff froth, and then applied thickly to the face at bedtime, and allowed to dry on to the skin. In the morning it should be bathed off with milk and honey lotion. A teaspoonful of honey added to the milk acts as an astringent and makes a good base for powder.

freckles on the same spots each day.

For some of the tests she made, Anne Shirley was supplied with freckles by the make-up department. They looked real enough, and were not unbecoming, but the director wanted to know who would see to it that each freckle occupied exactly the same spot each day!

COLOURED STAR FOR FILMS.

Josephine Baker, the coloured revue actress, has become a film star (says Reuters' Paris correspondent).

She is busy making her first big film there. It has an Eastern setting, and will be called "Zouzo." When it is finished she will prepare for her debut as a comic opera star in a modern version of Offenbach's "La Creole."

NEW AIRPORT FOR LONDON

BUILDING ALONG THAMES

TRAFFIC CONTROL BY AUTOGYRO

London (Bup). One of the chief obstacles which stand in the way of the development of air traffic in this country is the difficulty of providing airports reasonably near the big cities. In a great number of cases the time saved by rapid air travel is more than offset by the time lost in transit to and from the airports at each end of a trip. So we are out to change all that.

If proposals now being considered are carried into effect the City of London will have its own airport within its own limits. The City Corporation is making a special enquiry into the feasibility of such a plan. It is suggested that there shall be erected a huge reinforced concrete platform at a considerable height along the foreshore of the Thames or above existing riverside warehouses. The originators of the plan set great store on a City site, as this would enable the Corporation to be master of a situation which is likely to grow in importance as time goes on. The view is held that the future trade and commerce of the city is largely bound up with a practical and speedy solution of the problem.

The cost, of course, would be colossal, but the Corporation of the City of London, however, has greater facilities for raising the necessary funds than any other similar body in the world.

WIRES TO DISAPPEAR.

Just at the same time as, appropriately enough, we are planning to build our airports in the air, so we are well on the way to putting our telephone wires underground.

All telephone poles in Britain will be abolished, according to plans laid down by Sir Kingsley Wood, the Postmaster-General.

So far, nine million miles of telephone wires run underground, and there is only another million or so to follow. Thousands of men are being engaged to lay a linking-up underground cable, 220 miles long, linking Scotland in instantaneous communication with the rest of the country. As far as London is concerned the distance to the Scottish border is from 800 to 930 miles; from London to Edinburgh or Glasgow is about 400 miles. This scheme will cost $3,750,000. Ten million dollars is to be spent on speeding up the telephone service within the next few months.

POLICE IN THE SKY.

Taking to the air again. One of the popular hymns bias us to "look upwards to the skies." The other day London did.

Millions of us, I suppose, stared into the heavens to watch the police hovering over the streets in an autogyro and frequently descending—by special permission of the Air Ministry—to within 800 feet of the ground; which is far lower than the 4,000 feet minimum prescribed for ordinary flying.

The purpose of the police flight was to work out a scheme for a sort of higher control of traffic from the air.

Such is the peculiar layout of London (its streets running at all angles and in all sorts of curves and with many thoroughfares frequently converging at "circuses") that the real cause of a traffic block at one point is often to be found at some relatively remote spot. Thus it is often impossible to discover from the ground. For instance, the other day serious traffic block symptoms at Westminster and their focal point at Kinnington, a couple of miles away.

If the plan is found practicable, the traffic police at this or that congested spot will be enabled to receive wireless orders from autogyros overhead and so to break up jams elsewhere by judicious diversion of traffic.

FAREWELL CONCERT

SIR DAN GODFREY
RETIRES

MANY YEARS AT BOURNEMOUTH

Memorable scenes were witnessed at the Bournemouth Pavilion when Sir Dan Godfrey gave this farewell concert after forty-one years' service as conductor of the Bournemouth municipal orchestra.

His was a triumphant farewell. One thousand people had to be refused admission to the Pavilion. They had gathered there, knowing that all seats had been booked some few weeks ago, in the hope that some of the tickets would be returned.

Sir Dan throughout the concert was his imperturbable self, but at the end, when he was replying to a speech of congratulation by Sir Hugh Allen, he almost broke down as he spoke of the loyalty of the members of the orchestra, some of whom were leaving that night after forty years' service.

"I hope it will be possible," he said, "for them to be rewarded in some substantial manner."

At the conclusion of the concert Sir Dan shook hands with Mr. Bertram Lewis, the leader of the orchestra, and Mr. Montague Birch, the deputy conductor, the latter presenting him with a laurel wreath on behalf of the orchestra. A large bunch of white heather was also handed to Sir Dan, who was visibly affected by the last scenes of his farewell.

ARM IN ARM WITH SUCCESSOR.

Just afterwards, however, he was smiling again, and arm in arm with Mr. Richard Austin, his successor, whom he introduced to the audience.

"I am sure at least," said Sir Dan, "that he will maintain our musical prestige. He has the essentials for success—youth, ability, considerable experience and a charming personality."

Mr. Austin, in acknowledging the compliment, said he would endeavour, to the utmost of his ability, to maintain the wonderful reputation which Sir Dan had made for the orchestra, for himself and for Bournemouth.

Sir Hugh Allen said he was commissioned to convey to Sir Dan the warmest good wishes and sincere gratitude of many musicians, composers, conductors and performers, and also of the great musical institutions, at the head of the list being that grand old man of music, Sir Alexander Mackenzie.

They all realised, said Sir Hugh, the great debt they owed to Sir Dan Godfrey. In him the young composer always had a friend in need. His record would stand for many years, and should be a great stimulus to his successor. "I offer Sir Dan," he added, "the gratitude of all who love music and live by it."

At the conclusion the whole audience stood and sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

TRIBUTE AT DINNER.

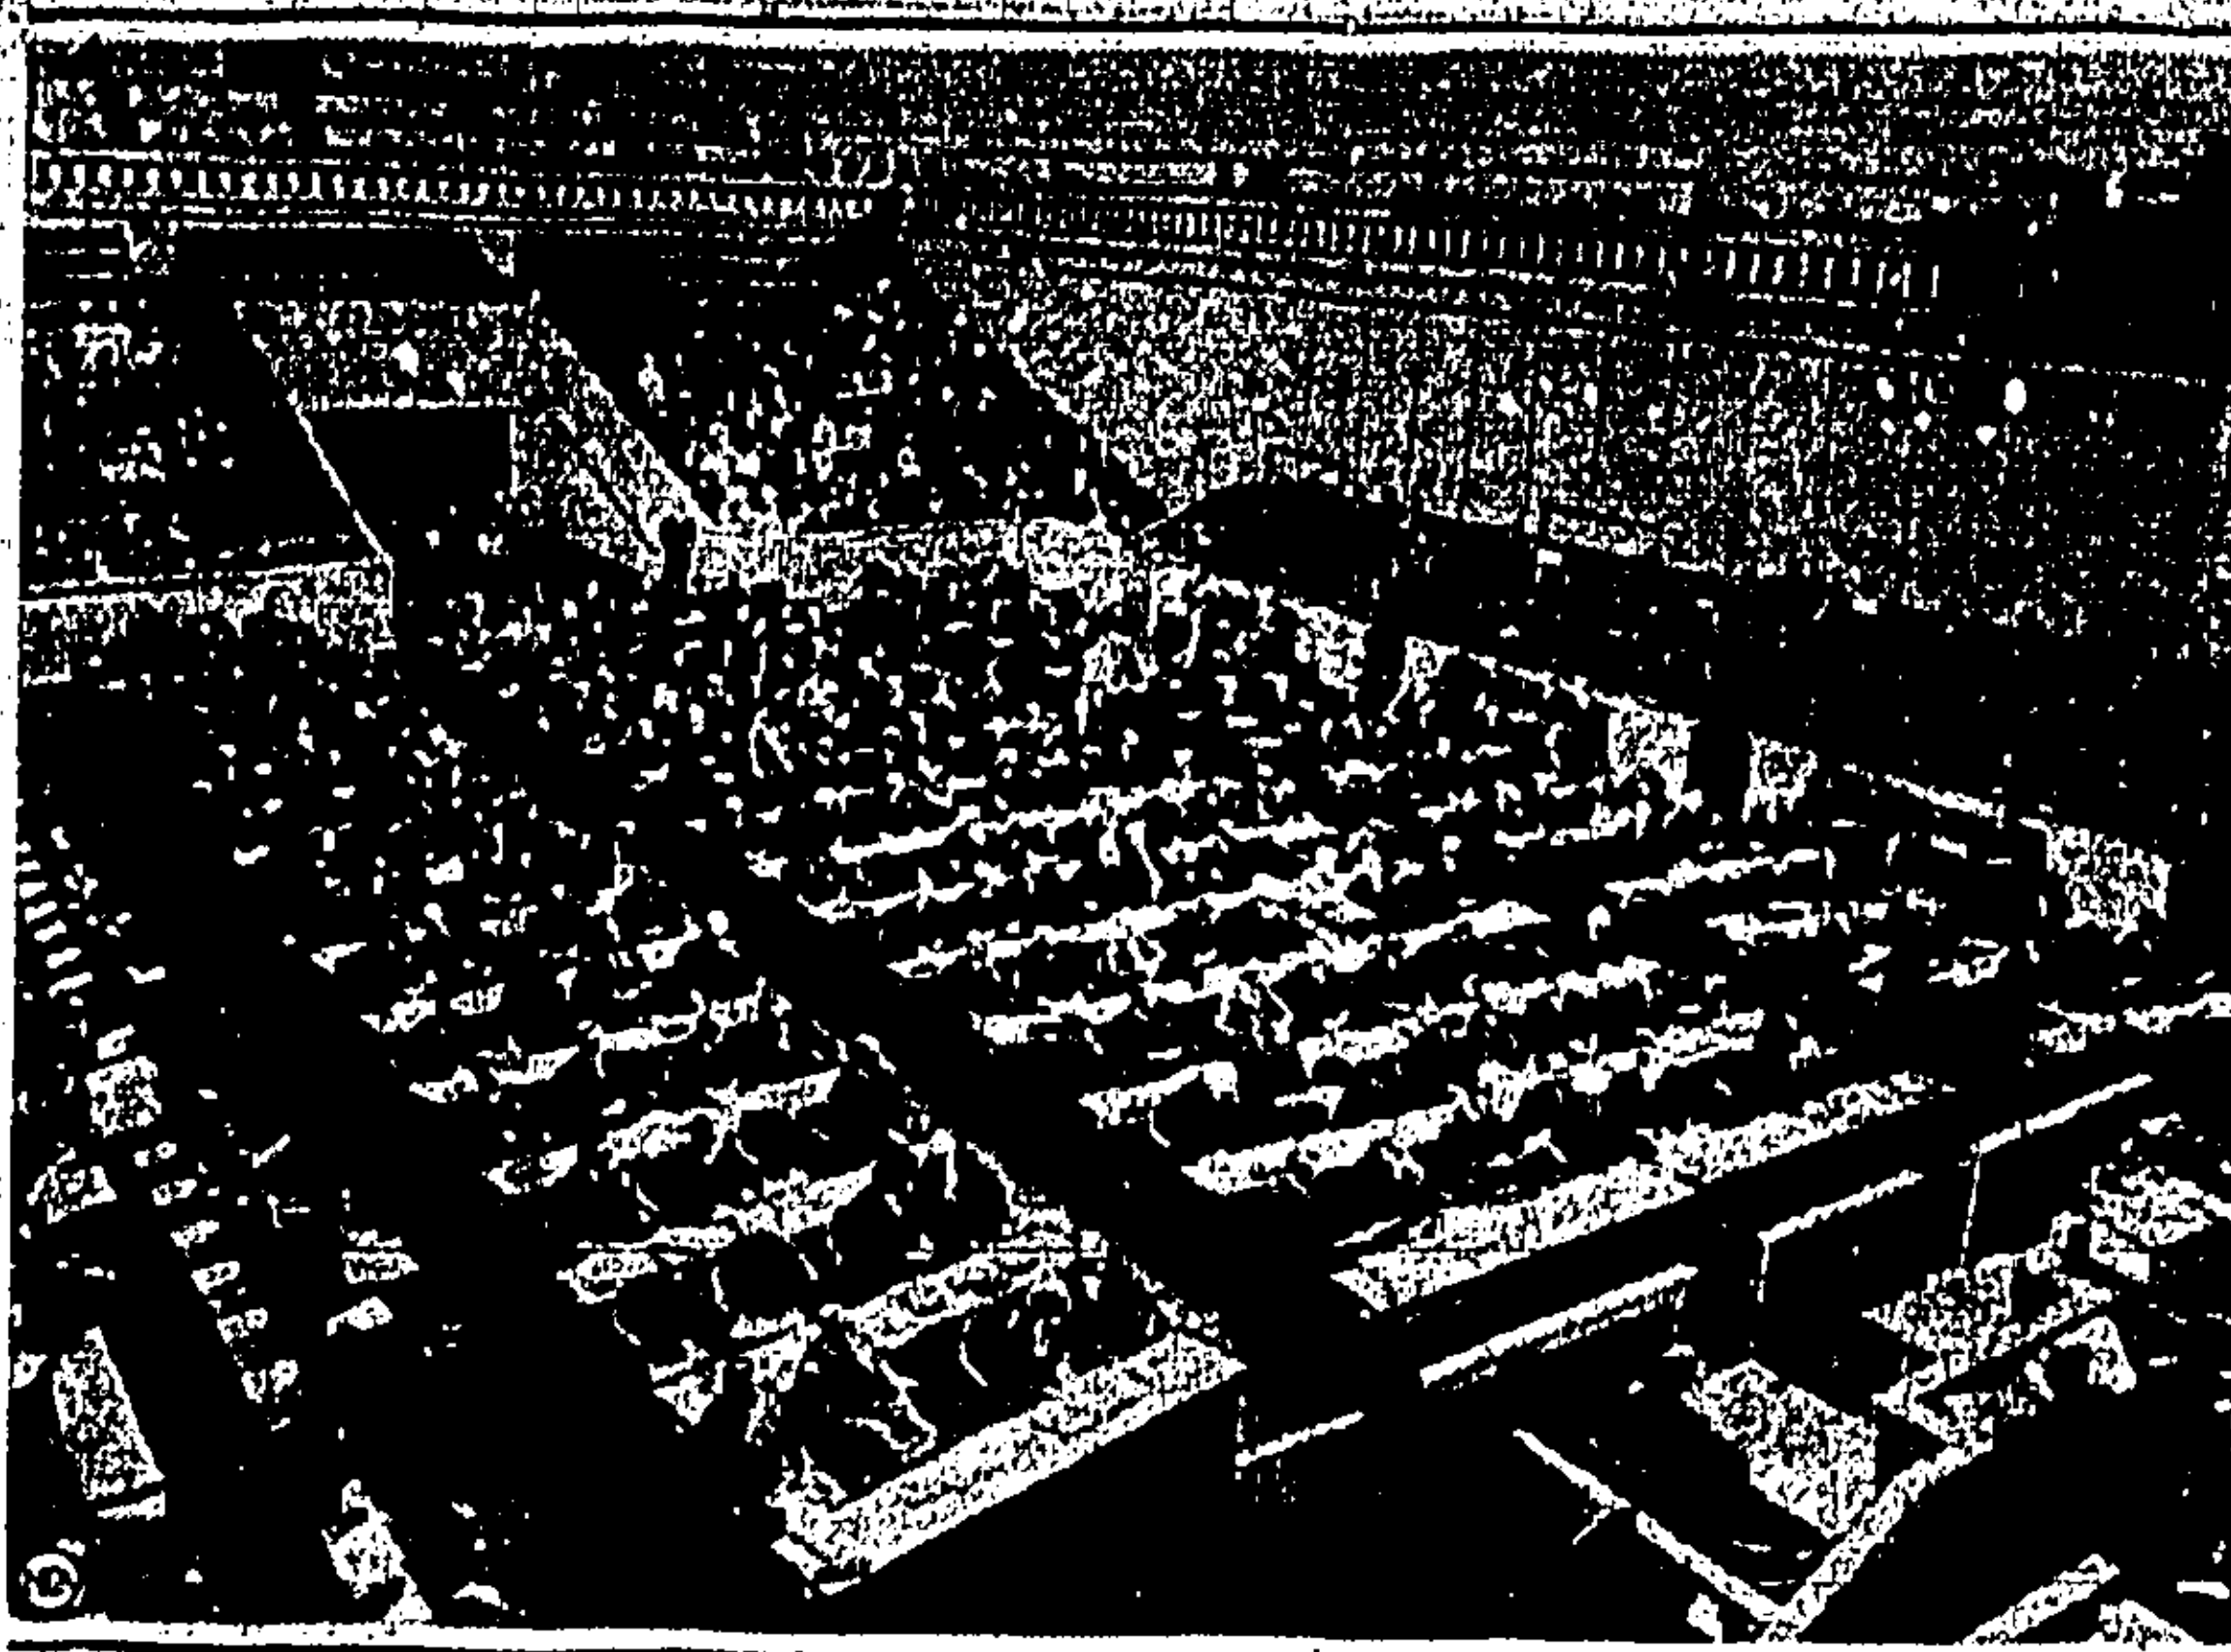

About 300 leading citizens of Bournemouth were present at the Municipal at a complimentary dinner to Sir Dan.

Proposing his health, the Mayor, Alderman J. R. Edgecombe, said it would be difficult to say how much modern British music owed to him. By giving very many British composers an opportunity at a very important time in their careers, he encouraged them when encouragement was scarce, and undoubtedly brought the ability of many now distinguished musicians to the notice of the public.

Sir Dan, in reply, referred to modern music with its new harmonic design and new orchestral effects. He said he thought the finest masterpieces of the great composers would long outlast the experimental music of to-day, which lacked the fundamental factor of understanding for 90 per cent. of listeners—melody.

With regard to the future of music at Bournemouth, he said the Corporation were determined to keep up the town's prestige in that respect, and to give Mr. Richard Austin, his successor, every possible chance to do that.

Sir Hugh Allen, proposing the toast of the County Borough of Bournemouth, said Bournemouth was a shining example of what municipalities could do for music.

SUFFOLK A SHRINE OF BRITISH GLORY

HISTORIC SPOTS IN BEAUTIFUL COUNTY OF ENGLAND

The early history of the county of Suffolk is practically the same as that of the adjoining county of Norfolk, the former being the southern, and the latter the northern, section of the Saxon kingdom of East Angles.

The county town of Ipswich, which was known in Saxon times as Gipeswic, is principally famous as being the birthplace of Cardinal Wolsey, whose father carried on business in the town as a butcher. In the pursuit of which he gained an evil reputation for selling inferior meat and giving short weight. The Salvation Army Citadel now occupies the site of the theatre in which David Garrick, the greatest of English actors, made his first professional appearance on the stage in Southern's "Oroonoko."

The attractions of the seaside town of Aldeburgh are described in "The Borough," a poem from the pen of George Crabbe, who was born in the town in 1754. In the parish church are memorials to him and to Henry Fawcett, the blind Postmaster-General, who was responsible for many postal reforms. His wife was a sister of Dame Garrett Anderson, who was at one time the Mayor of Aldeburgh, the first woman to hold that office in England and one of the earliest of British women doctors.

Wilkie Collins, the novelist, wrote "No Name" while living at a house in the town known as "Sea View."

ONCE A SEAPORT.

Dunwich is now but a small village, but it was once an important seaport, besides being for a time the capital of East Angles and also the seat of a bishopric, which latter was established about 630. The town suffered severely from the encroachments of the sea, in common with the rest of the East Anglian coast, and at various times its palaces and houses were overwhelmed and the harbour blocked up with sand. In the garden of the ancient rectory at Stowmarket is a mulberry tree, which is reputed to have been planted by John Milton, the blind poet, while on a visit to his old tutor—Thomas Young. A few miles away is Appuldurpe Church, which was the scene of the marriage of the parents of the greatest of modern soldiers, Lord Kitchener, many of whose ancestors are buried in the church at Lakeheath, which contains a memorial to the man who did such wonderful work in the early days of the late Great War.

The town of Framlingham is a spot of great historic interest. Its fine ruined castle was erected in 1109 by Roger Bigod, the ancestor of the Earls of Norfolk, and it later became the property of the Howards, when the dukedom was conferred upon that family. It was forfeited and restored to them on many occasions before it was finally taken from them in the seventeenth century. Within its walls Queen Mary took refuge during the nine days that Lady Jane Grey occupied the throne, and it was mainly the men of Suffolk who aided Mary to enforce her claim to the Crown. In the local church are memorials to the poet Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, who was executed by Henry VIII, and to Thomas Howard, Earl of Norfolk, who escaped a similar fate solely owing to the sudden and unexpected death of the King.

POET'S GRAVE.

Edward Fitzgerald, the poet and translator of the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," spent the closing years of his life at "Little Ghrange," in the town of Woodbridge, and he is buried in the village church at the Boulge, close to Bredfield House, where he was born. A rose bush from Omar's tomb in Persia was planted on the poet's grave, but it speedily withered away. In the churchyard at Southwold is the resting-place of Agnes Strickland, who wrote "The Queens of England," and who was born in the adjacent village of Reydon; while Honington was the birthplace of Robert Bloomfield, the poet and author of "The Farmer's Boy," the scene of which is laid at Sapiston.

George Borrow, traveller and author, lived for several years on the banks of Oulton Broad, where he died in 1881; and in the vicinity of Bury St. Edmunds is Barfield Hall, the birthplace of Arthur Young, the agricultural writer, who is buried in the nearby churchyard. The villages of Kersey and Lindley gave their name to the fabrics known as Kersey and Linsey-woolsey.

NAMED FOR MARTYR.

Bury St. Edmunds, the Villa Faustina of the days of the Roman occupation of Britain and later the capital of East Angles for a time, was named after King Edmund the Martyr, who was buried there, and whose tomb was a Mecca for pilgrims for several centuries. Henry Cockton, the author of the once popular, but now almost unknown, humorous story "Valentine Vox, the Ventriloquist," was buried in the town, and in St. Mary's Church is the tomb of Mary Tudor, the sister of Henry VIII.

On the Market Hill at Sudbury is a statue of Thomas Gainsborough, the painter, who was a native of the town, which was also the birthplace of Simon of Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, who was seized by Wat Tyler's rebels when they broke into the Tower of London, and who was hastily executed by them on Tower Hill.

The county has numerous associations with the novels of Charles Dickens. Blundeston, which was a favourite resort of Thomas Grey, the poet, is the Blunderstone which Dickens describes as the birthplace of David Copperfield; Sudbury is the Eatanwill of "Pickwick Papers"; "The White Horse Hotel" at Ipswich figures in the same story; and it was at "The Angel Hotel" at Bury St. Edmunds that Sam Weller first encountered Job Trotter.

DUKE OF GLOUCESTER TO PLAY PART

As a climax to the dedication of the Shrine of Remembrance, Melbourne, by the Duke of Gloucester on November 11, 20,000 war veterans assembled on the Shrine approaches. As the pigeons are thrown into the air by the Diggers, acting as one man, a choir of 2,000 voices will reach a crescendo note in a hymn of triumph, and will sustain it until the birds have sensed their direction and sped off on their long flights to every State in the Commonwealth.

For twelve months, members of the special committee appointed to arrange the ceremony of dedication coddled their brains for a fitting climax. In the pigeon release, which was suggested by one member and unanimously adopted, they claim to have arrived at the most spectacular climax ever arranged for a mass demonstration, and one outstanding in world history. The birds will be homing pigeons, to be supplied by homing clubs in every State of Australia.

When the Royal party emerges from the inner Shrine, the Premier of Victoria, in the name of the people will call on the Duke of Gloucester to dedicate the State's war memorial. The first movements of the dedication will be accompanied by the choir singing a chant. As the dedication reaches its climax, the choir will begin a crescendo, and at a given signal the 20,000 pigeons will be released.

This U.S. $75,000 blast that spouted smoke like a volcano on Oct. 29, 1934, was the result of a fire in a small town in Ohio. Twelve fire companies, shouting for help, lay hoses from a fire engine to the burning building. The fire was caused by a short circuit in the wiring of the building.

NEW REGULATIONS FOR PEDESTRIANS.

London, Oct. 27. New regulations relating to pedestrian crossings have been issued by Mr. L. Hore-Bellish, Minister of Transport. He will not make it compulsory for motorists to use the specially marked crossings, but he will place the pedestrian on the same footing as the motorist regarding liability to punishment.

Henceforth, any person found guilty of a breach of the regulations will be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £2. Previously, if motorists were convicted, they were liable to a fine not exceeding £5, while pedestrians who were similarly convicted had a maximum fine of five shillings laid down.

Under the new regulations, at crossings where traffic is controlled by police or signals, pedestrians have the absolute right of way only when traffic is definitely held up by a policeman's hand or a signal light.

In the case of crossings where traffic is not controlled by police or signals, the pedestrian will have the right of way at all times, and traffic must give way to him. Drivers have been urged to approach all crossings with care and to be prepared to stop if necessary, while vehicles must not stand at crossings.—Reuter.

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

For sheer, unadulterated fun, a whirlwind of gags, laughs and grand music, those who haven't unlimbered their faces into a smile for years are recommended to see "Shoot the Works", a fast bit of fooling which opened last night at the Queen's Theatre. This Paramount film features Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie and his band, Dorothy Dell, Arline Judge, Alison Ekberg and Roscoe Karns in a comedy as thrilling and unexpected as a three-ring circus. It is a picture of actors and singers on the rise, and it centres on the romance of a side-show barker, Oakie, who loves a blues singer, loses her to a big shot and wins her back again. A good second romance between Roscoe Karns and Arline Judge is most novel. Karns, as a sluggish flagpole sitter, is literally up a pole throughout most of the film, trying desperately to check on his philandering girl and win a championship besides. The film also serves to introduce Ben Bernie and his orchestra to picture fans. In a part that given full play to his own original and breezy humour, Bernie plays the orchestra leader whose purpose in life is to settle a feud with a certain famous columnist. Music for the picture was written by the acutune-teams of Ranger and Robin and Gordon and Rovel. Wesley Gordon, whose most recent picture was "Bohème", directed from an adaptation of an original play by Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler.

"Here Comes the Groom"

Fast fun, variety and hilarious action characterize the spontaneous film comedy "Here Comes the Groom" which opens on Thursday at the Queen's Theatre. Jack Haley, Mary Boland, Neil Hamilton, Patricia Ellis, Isabel Jewell, Sidney Toler and Larry Gray are the principal players. Edward Sedgwick directed the film for Charles R. Rogers, independent producer at the Paramount studios. Trying to prove to his girl that he can be a big success in his profession, burglary, Jack Haley gets himself into quite a mixup while holding up a poker game. The cops spot him, give chase and Haley finds escape in the pullman compartment of a railroad train waiting at the station. But his troubles aren't ended here. The compartment in which he hides belongs to a young bride, whose husband, a famous radio tenor, has deserted her because her father's money has suddenly disappeared. She's on her way home, and forces Haley to pose as the husband. The bride's family, especially her nit-wit aunt, played by Mary Boland, are radio fans. Aunt Mary is "not" about the tenor and proceeds to have Haley sing for her. As if all this weren't enough for one man to bear, Haley finds his own sweetheart in the house, trying to steal the family

IL DUCE'S ESCAPE

PLOT AGAINST LIFE UNEARTHED

Florence, Oct. 27. A plot to assassinate the Italian Dictator, Signor Benito Mussolini, who attended a demonstration today in honour of the 37 Fascist martyrs, is reported to have been unearthed by the police. It is stated that numerous bombs were found in the possession of several foreigners. The whereabouts of all Germans and Russians were most carefully checked and elaborate precautions were taken for the safety of Signor Mussolini, including house to house searches. The streets were hung with black flags inscribed with white letters forming the names of the martyrs killed in Florence in the early days of Fascism. The procession was headed by the coffin, and thousands of Black Shirts and civilians left Duomo and proceeded to the Church of Santa Croce, where the coffin was interred.

Signor Mussolini, standing at the door of the mortuary chapel, saluted each coffin as it was brought in.—Reuter.

Jewels. With this good start, the hilarious situations pile up, and over end, and the film ends with an uproarious finale.

"I Give My Love"

Karl Freund, director of "I Give My Love," the Vicki Baum screenplay which will be showing at the Central Theatre to-morrow, was the target of lead during the filming of the Universal Picture. Not bullets, but pencils—in the hands of 20 art students used in the picture. The students spent their spare time sketching members of the cast which is headed by Paul Lukas and Wynne Gibson, but Freund, who wears a dark blue beret while directing, seemed to catch their eye as most picturesque subject.

"Thirty-Day Princess"

She may be a bit late in adopting the idea, but nevertheless, Sylvia Sydney, Paramount film star, whose latest picture is "Thirty-Day Princess," comes on Wednesday to the King's Theatre, because she wants to, thought! It all comes under the head of work. Her entrance on the screen in this new picture is made riding a bicycle. With Cary Grant, Robert Arnold, Lucien Littlefield and Vince Barnett in the supporting roles, "Thirty-Day Princess" presents Miss Sydney as a little out-of-work actress, who plays the role of a princess in order to help her bankers float a dubious loan but almost loses the love of the only man she cared for.

WANCHAI MURDER

UNKNOWN COOLIE STABBED WITH KNIFE

Police are investigating a murder which occurred in Queen's Road East, near the junction of Arnsall Street, yesterday evening, the victim being an unknown Chinese man.

It appears that about 6.20 p.m., the man was seen walking along the street, in company of some Chinese, by a party of British soldiers.

The man walked for about ten yards, then staggered and collapsed outside No. 9 Queen's Road East. He was found to have a knife wound over the heart. Deceased had the appearance of a street or market coolie. Police officers, including Mr. L. H. C. Callthrop, A.S.P., Chief Inspector Shannon and Detective-sergeant Fitches were summoned and a search was made, but no weapon was found.

The body was later removed to the Public Mortuary. This is the second murder since Friday.

WHERE ARE ORATORS

OF YESTERDAY?

ing a speech of distinction and charm. As an orator, however, he must be classed as "lazy". Mr. Neville Chamberlain is more popular now in the country than he has ever been, and he is a man who has always scorned theatrical effects in oratory. It is rumoured, however, that now that the national finances are in a healthier condition, the Chancellor proposes to launch out in a lighter and brighter style of speaking, and if he does this, he may change the entire political scene!

In private life Mr. Chamberlain is very genial, but he is inclined to take his national responsibilities too seriously. Most of his speeches he turns over in his mind when fishing—his favourite sport—which perhaps explains their usual brevity and clarity!

Mr. George Lansbury is a moving speaker when roused, and he invariably looks like the typical evangelistic speaker more common in the last century than now. He visibly impresses every audience he addresses, and all members of the Commons have much misadventure since his unfortunate accident. He is at his best when speaking impromptu, and his words come tumbling from his lips, but all of them perfectly phrased.

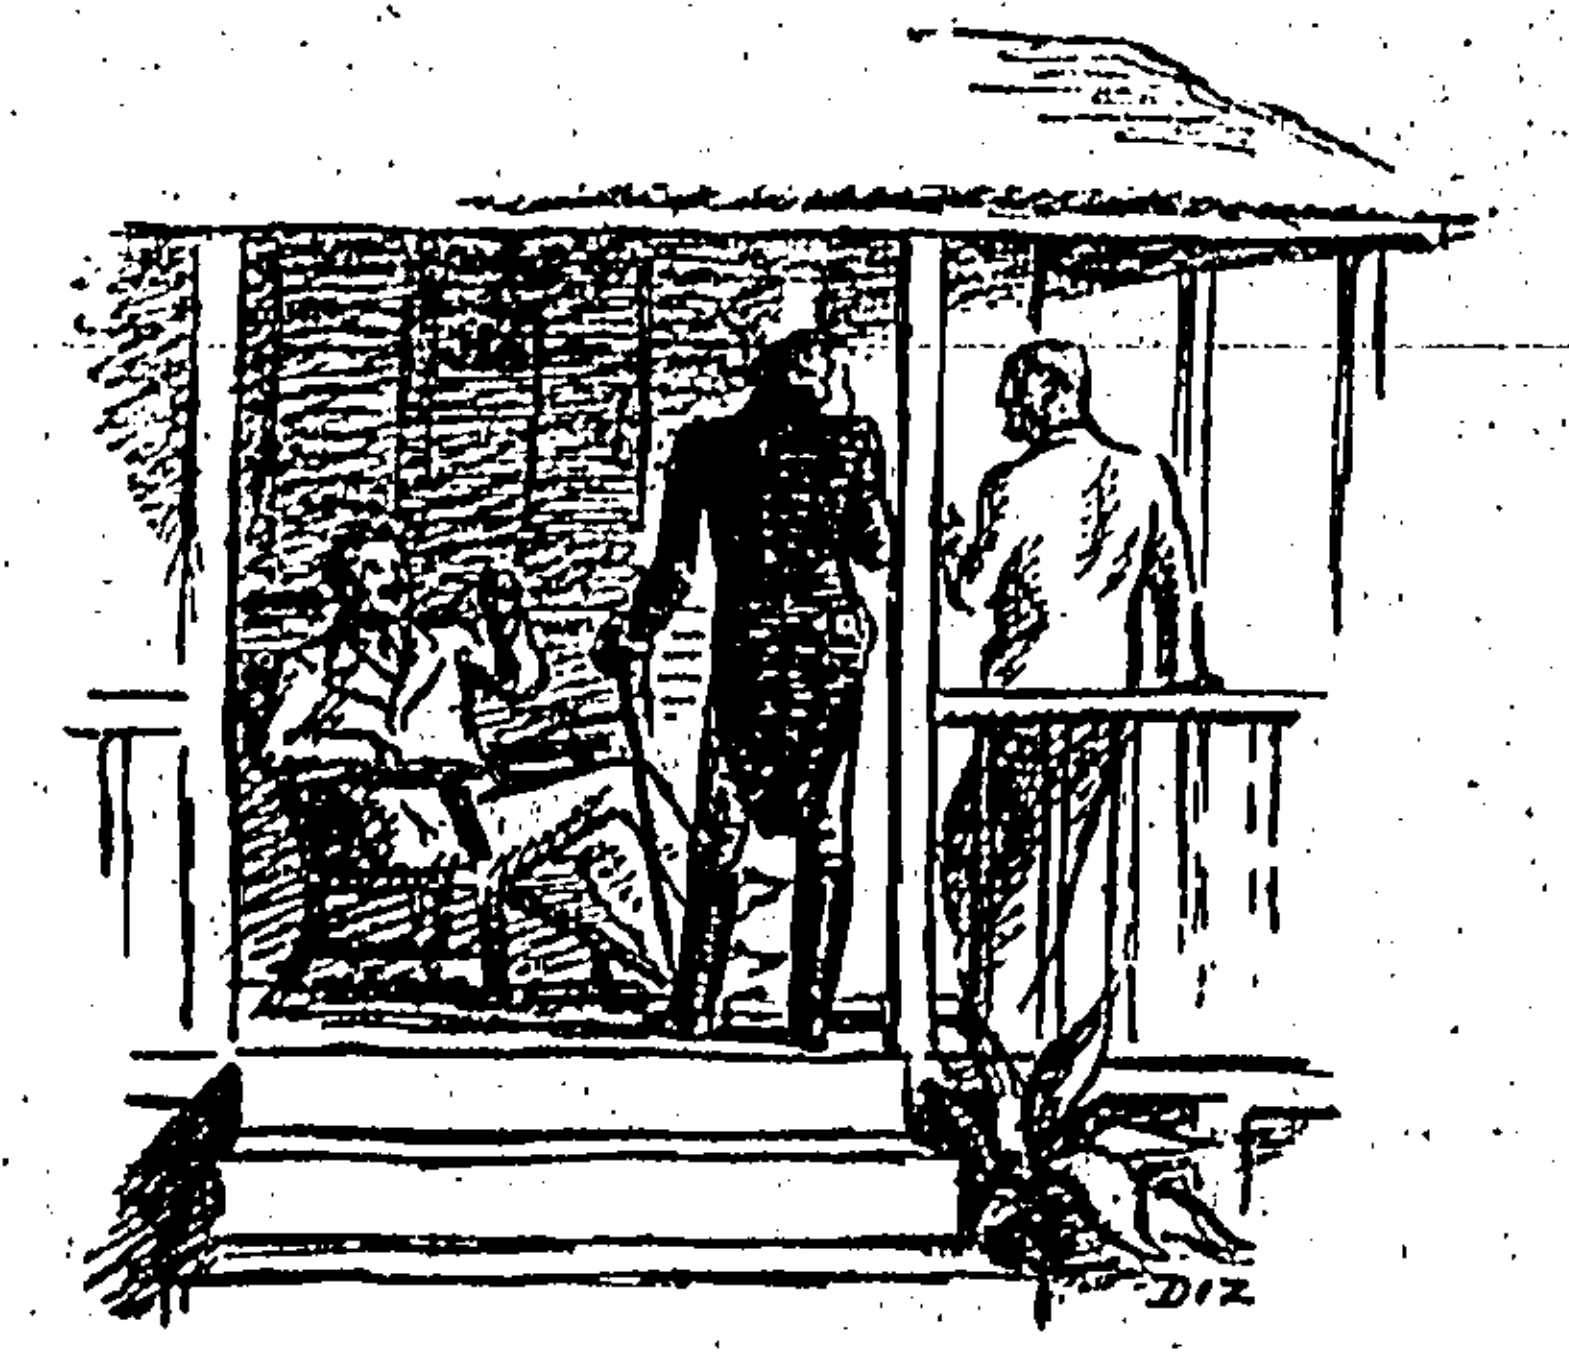

Lady Oxford and Asquith once said that Mr. James Maxton was the greatest orator in Parliament to-day, and certainly the well-known Clydeside M.P. has many claims to the honour. His picturesque appearance does much to enhance his success as a speaker, but undoubtedly his resonant voice, with the soft Scottish "burr," his elegant, well-chosen language, and the "fire" he can put at will into his utterances, make Mr. Maxton a great platform power. He has never been seen looking at a note when speaking. "I'm used to talking to children without notes," he is reported to have remarked in the Commons once when tackled on this. "Jimmie," of course, was for years a school teacher in Scotland. Whatever present-day orators may be, they at least have more respect for their audiences than the late Lord Salisbury. He once told a nervous young speaker a certain cure for platform fright. "When you rise up to speak," said the veteran statesman, "just take a good look at the audience and say to yourself: 'I never saw such a lot of fools in my life!'"

Of orators in the sense that Burke, Fox and Gladstone were orators we have fewer, and I think that in time the stolid style of speaking will disappear. The microphone is not kind to those who declaim, and the microphone is now as essential to public speaking as a platform.

Under the auspices of the Hong-kong University Medical Society, Dr. Li Shu Fan will deliver a lecture entitled, "Impressions of the Congress of the Far Eastern Association of Tropical Medicine," on Wednesday next at 6.15 p.m., in the Union Assembly Room of the University. All interested are welcome.

THE FUTURE OF LIBERALISM

The heavy reverse which the Liberal Party recently suffered in the North Lambeth by-election would appear to be a further indication of the point that Liberalism is a dying force in British politics. Or, perhaps the better way of expressing the thought would be to say that official Liberalism is doomed to extinction. The plain fact is that the great principles for which Liberalism has stood have been adopted by the Labour Party, which, by reason of its more incisive methods, has stolen the thunder from the Liberals. It is therefore the Liberal Party, rather than Liberalism itself, which is so steadily losing ground. Torn by dissensions in its ranks, and stung to fierce bellicosity by the taunts of some of its opponents, the Executive of the Liberal National Federation has, none the less, decided to make valour the better part of its discretion and is determined to attack along the widest possible front at the next General Election. Such blind, dauntless courage has not been seen since the days of Don Quixote. Every one outside the inner councils of official Liberalism knows that the most it can hope to do, when it next seeks the support of the electorate, is to hold the few seats it has. By all accounts it will find that a hard task enough. It was ordinary commonsense, therefore, to propose, as Sir Charles Hobhouse recently did, that the party should concentrate its attention on those constituencies where it appeared to have a fair chance of success. But this does not satisfy the party wire-pullers. They are for a glorious, spectacular attack all along the line. A minimum of four hundred candidates will take the field, or so it is hoped. They will fight unaided, for they are determined to eschew entangling alliances with other parties. It is magnificent, but it is not war. The local Liberal organisations will be expected to finance the great adventure. In many cases they will not find it easy to do so. Official Liberalism may have a part to play for some time to come in British politics, but it is not unfair to assume that it will be a minor part. There is no indication of an imminent revival in the fortunes of the party; nor can reasons be found why such a revival should take place. Thus the never-say-die spirit which the Federation Executive has displayed is more tribute to its determination than to its discernment.

NOTES OF THE DAY

UNREST IN SPAIN.

A recent alliance—a somewhat axiomatic one—between Socialists and Communists has led to the condition of grave unrest in Spain. It is the red shirt party that is responsible for the present revolutionary outbreaks. For some months past there have been two disturbing factors at work. One is the continuance of unrest in Catalonia and the other the formation of the common front between Socialists, Anarcho-Syndicalists and Communists. The latter could hardly fail to lead to revolutionary upheaval. The Socialists as a whole have succumbed to the temptation of joining the revolutionary front. They have allied themselves with Communism, which believes that the only success in establishing the political regime in which it believes lies in an armed revolution and the installation of a dictatorship. The Government in Spain since the abandonment of monarchy for republicanism has never been secure. It has had to deal with a variety of warring factions on the political front. It promised Socialism for the country and proved unable to put it into practice. It engaged in petty persecution of Roman Catholics and Conservatives alike. Provocative talk and irritating action have been the outcome of republicanism.

MEDIAEVAL MENTALITY

There still maintains in Spain a mediaeval mentality and a spirit of unrest which will not down. Preparations for a counter revolution have never ceased since the deposition of King Alfonso, and stories of "arms" and "ammunition" have been collected in a widespread way in preparation for the day of outbreaks. The alliance between the Socialists and Communists has been the step leading to the present state of revolt. Even though the revolt may lead to the establishment of a dictatorship by the Rightist parties, it is certain that dictatorship, however devised, will raise popular passion to the boiling point. Considering the character of the last revolution in Spain and the inability to bring about order, Government under the republicanism is almost certain that other revolutions must ensue before the country settles down.

A NATION OF SOLDIERS

New legislation passed in Italy provides for pre-military and post-military education. One item of the Fascist doctrine has, according to the Corriere della Sera, been translated into a practical reality by the abolition of any separation between military and civil life. In principle hereafter, from the age of eight, all Italians are soldiers. The old Spartan legend has been revived. Pre-military and post-military education is compulsory. In other words, pupils in the lower schools will not be admitted to their examinations, and university students will not be allowed to take their degrees if they have not followed efficiently the military courses. Moreover, for ten years after a man has been discharged from the army he must undergo the practical courses of education.

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL

There are regulations for co-ordinating the armed forces with all those institutions which contribute to the formation of the military nation. There is moral and spiritual preparation involved. Boys are to be made "passionately interested" in military life. They are to be brought frequently into contact with the armed forces of the country. They must know the military and geographical character of the land and the sea boundaries of Italy and make a comparative study of the armed forces of all the other principal States. All this is regarded in Italy as a logical development in the Fascist Revolution. The first great step was the consolidation of the nation for political, social and economic purposes. The second step is the formation of a bloc for military purposes. Italy is steadily pursuing a course designed for "higher prestige among the big nations, power, expansion and for the famous place in the sun." Premier Mussolini's policy is to make the country strong so that it can meet any and every emergency.

WHERE ARE ORATORS OF YESTERDAY?

By BERNARD BLAND

There is general agreement that modern oratory has changed greatly in manner and style since, say, the time of Gladstone.

There are some who still prefer to hear a speaker declaim rounded sentences in deep and rich tones with appropriate gestures rather than the modern fashion of dry, matter-of-fact speeches with "emotion" carefully avoided. But there is no doubt that this is not an age which favours flamboyant orations.

Mr. Winston Churchill is the best modern representative of the traditional oratorical style. Yet even he is not scoring his old triumphs with his verbal "fireworks." It is always a delight to listen to Mr. Churchill in spite of the well-known fact that he carefully prepares and rehearses all his brilliant speeches beforehand. But do his efforts have the same effect as they might have had in more leisurely Victorian days?

While the modern British public love to hear an "old-time" style of orator, they only fully trust a man who scorns oratorical arts and tricks. The Prince of Wales is a perfect type of speaker whom the public of to-day favour most. With a pleasant cultured voice, and plain, simple sentences, the Prince makes his speech before the microphone or at any function with easy grace and instantaneous success.

To say that the Prince composes all his speeches himself would be ridiculous, but he does add to and eliminate from the official text to suit his own personal ideas. If he could rid himself of the nervousness when speaking in public which still lingers with him, the Prince could truthfully be described as one of the best public speakers in the world. As it is, he is regarded by the B.B.C. as an ideal "broad-caster."

When he was a boy the Prince was once told by his grandfather, King Edward, never to read his speeches when he grew up. King Edward made his first public speech at a Royal Literary Fund dinner when he was barely twenty. He made so many mistakes in reading from his written-out speech that he tore it up in disgust and continued impromptu—and it was a great success!

From that evening to the end of his long life, King Edward never read out a speech. King George, on the other hand, prefers to have a typewritten copy of any speech he is to make, and he boldly carries it in his hand, and reads it out in a rich and resonant voice. Now and then he will lower the paper to survey his audience, and as a speaker His Majesty makes a truly regal and imposing figure.

The King takes great pains over the preparation of his speeches, and has his own opinion of what he should or should not say. When he crossed over to Belfast to open the Northern Parliament during the critical Irish Sinn Féin period, he declined to make the rather bellicose speech suggested, and instead appealed to all Irishmen to forget the unhappy past and unite for the benefit of the land they loved so well—a bold and courageous appeal which time amply vindicated.

The Queen and the Duchess of York are strangely averse from speaking in public. Her Majesty has a most musical voice and an impressive presence, but she frankly confesses that to make a speech in public is beyond her, and she blames her secluded girlhood for her incurable shyness.

It is to be hoped that the Duchess of York will make more public speeches in the future than she has done in the past. She has a delightful platform personality, and is a better speaker than even her husband, the Duke of York.

A few years ago the Duke was a rather slow and hesitant speaker, but recently his delivery has greatly improved, although still liable to "break down" suddenly. The Duchess invariably prompts him when this happens, and she is never at a loss for the missing "word."

The Duke of York likes to have voluminous notes beside him, and he writes more of his own speeches than the Prince of Wales.

Prince George, although his voice is rather light, is a charming speaker in public, and is always commendably brief and to the point. The Duke of Gloucester is a typical British Army officer, and talks like one in public and private. He gives the impression—perhaps a wrong one—that public speeches bore him to hear or deliver, and he sometimes hurries over his speech at a very rapid rate.

In politics, the Premier when at his best is still a great orator. The voice is like a perfectly tuned organ, and his handsome appearance adds to the effect. Mr. MacDonald is the sole author of all his speeches, and it is said he demurs even to figures being supplied to him by his faithful secretaries; he prefers to look up the statistics himself.

When in the U.S.A. a few years ago it was unanimously agreed that the British Premier was one of the greatest orators who had ever visited America.

Lord Snowden is seldom heard in public now, greatly to the regret of all those who like to hear public speaking at its best, irrespective of party. In his old Socialist days Philip Snowden's oratory delighted huge audiences. That bell-like voice, his masterly command of the English language and all its harmony and cadences, was a joy to hear.

Snowden seldom uses a note of any kind, but he has never been known to break down or be at a loss for a word or phrase. His memorable speech when he introduced the emergency Budget in 1931 will never be forgotten by those who heard it.

In many ways Stanley Baldwin is one of the greatest oratorical mysteries of the age. His style cannot be called attractive, he has a somewhat indolent manner in speaking, and his language is seldom outstanding or picturesque. Yet there are few speakers who sway audiences more and alter opinions so much as Mr. Baldwin. How he does it is his own secret. "That man is the most astute statesman in Europe," remarked a French diplomat recently. "He has the brains to conceal that he possesses brains, and by appearing an 'ordinary person' he kills the envy of people who hate a clever man."

Mr. Baldwin is a great lover of the English language, and when he chooses to exert himself in public, he finds no difficulty in making public is beyond her, and she

The Very Idea!

PEPPING UP ZBW!

Edward Kelly Gives His
Idea For A Programme
By Eddie Kelly, "Mike".

About the most uninspiring page in any newspaper is the one devoted to radio programmes. We've just been reading ZBW's programme in a morning contemporary and for a while we thought we'd got hold of a newspaper that was at least a year old.

We saw our mistake when we read that the station would broadcast the Fox Trot "Stormy Weather," because they've only had that record in stock nine months.

We hate to think of those poor people in the studio struggling every day, wondering whether it was Tuesday or Thursday they played "Gold Diggers Song," or whether the necessary margin of 48 hours had elapsed since the "Rio Rita" Selection was last broadcast, so we're going to get up a local programme as a suggestion for to-morrow.

To-day's programme from ZBW, broadcast on a wave-length of 376 gas-metres (488 silly-cycles).

THE BOOKSHELF

CONFUCIANISM AND MODERN CHINA

"Confucianism and Modern China," by Sir Reginald F. Johnston (Messrs. Victor Gollancz, Ltd., London; 8s. 6d.) is based on a series of lectures which the author delivered in Bristol University. By virtue of his lengthy residence in China and his first-hand knowledge of the subject, the author is well qualified to present a reasoned statement of Confucianism, and in this book he displays a keen sympathy with the standpoint of those Chinese who are anxious to save the cultural inheritance of their country from disintegration. He closely analyses the precepts of the Sage and disposes of many popular misconceptions of the Confucian cult. Not the least interesting of his conclusions is the spiritual kinship which he sees between "The New Life Movement" and Confucianism. Loyal Confucians who wish their Master to remain what he has been for two thousand years—the Sage and supreme Teacher of the Chinese people—must, he says, act on the advice recently given to the followers of a very different teacher, Karl Marx—"disentangle in his teaching from what is dead or no longer appropriate, what remains alive and capable of that growth and adaptation which is the prerogative of living things." But Sir Reginald maintains that Confucianism is a living thing and doubts whether anything in its teachings is really dead. The conclusion is reached that the altars of Confucianism are still warm, and it would be an evil day for China and the whole world if they were to grow cold.

BEAUTY IN EXILE.

In "Chao Chün: Beauty in Exile," by Shu Chün (Messrs. Kelly and Walsh, Ltd., Shanghai; $5.00), the authoress, Mrs. W. L. Johnston, presents the third of a series of romances on the four most famous historical beauties of China. This story of the tragedy of "The Brilliant Lady," deals with a character who has ever been a potent source of inspiration to all that is virtuous and lovely in woman. Obligated to marry a Tartar chieftain and to pass fifty years of her life beyond the confines of her native land, Chao Chün preserved to her dying day the modesty, humility and spirit of self-sacrifice that marked her as one of the outstanding women of her age. She is shown in this study as pre-eminent among the celebrities of Chinese history, not because of her matchless beauty alone, but because of her steadfast character, her undying patriotism, high courage and nobility of soul. The story is told with a charm and simplicity of treatment which betokens the real artist and is a valuable contribution to the study of noted characters of a past age. The book is produced in attractive form which is heightened by the illustrations, some in charming colours, which have been carefully chosen from old paintings either in the possession of the authoress or belonging to friends interested in her work.

SLAM BIDDING.

"Slam Bidding at Contract Bridge," by Lieut.-Col. J. Grose (Messrs. George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., London; 2s.) is a little publication which should prove of great value to serious students of the game. In it, twenty hands, which slams were either made or missed in first-class duplicate matches, are so arranged that each can be bid up by two persons acting as partners. This ingenious arrangement has been made possible by the inclusion, in a pocket at the end of the book, of a series of red and blue cards with four bridge hands printed on each. One person takes one of the red cards and supposes himself to be holding one of the hands detailed thereon, and the other takes the blue card containing the corresponding hand. The two persons, noting the score and the dealer, then proceed to bid their respective hands as they would in a game. Notes have been added to help players who are not already experts to understand the conventions used by the players and to acquire the art of approach bidding.

Carlos A. Remedios

The death occurred at the French Hospital on Saturday afternoon of Carlos Antonio Remedios, at the early age of 16, after an operation for appendicitis.

The eldest of a family of 10 children, of which the only other son, Tony, is the youngest, Carlos' death was a great loss to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Dos Remedios. Educated at St. Joseph's College, he commenced a career only 10 months ago when he joined the staff of the Asiatic Petroleum Co. He was a new recruit in the Portuguese Company of the Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps.

The funeral took place at the Catholic Cemetery yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the family. Flowers from Grandmother, Mrs. A. M. S. Remedios, were buried with the remains. The Rev. Fr. Page, of St. Margaret's Church, officiated.

Besides the bereaved parents and younger brother and sisters, there were present Mrs. A. M. S. Remedios (Grandmother), and Mrs. L. F. Sousa, Mr. U. B. Sousa and Mr. A. R. Remedios (uncles).

This Militarism

The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir,—I wish to express my strong disagreement with the choice of a time for the forthcoming Tattoo. It is difficult to imagine any time less suitable for such a display of military methods and for the raising of the civilian population to admiration of things martial than the month in which it has been agreed to commemorate the death and sufferings of so many who in the last war offered their lives to end war. Those were the words used to induce a peace-loving people to undergo and inflict sufferings such as the human race has never collectively known before, and which it cannot face again and survive with the civilisation which makes life worth living. It is not too much to say that the choice of this time, which to us many as remember the last war is not the occasion of a holiday like the rest, will seem to many like a pointed mockery of the ideals to which so many sacrificed so much, and a breach of faith more cynical than those of those who joined up in 1914 could have imagined. Even the most confirmed militarist would be sorry to think that the soldiers of the present or the civilian population on whom they must draw as before would interpret this as an earnest of how future promises to volunteers will be honoured.

It is possible that we have misconstrued the choice of the date for these events, and that the dates were selected with a view rather to preparing the public mind for the due observance of the solemnity of Armistice Day rather than for its desecration. The leaflet which advises our attendance at the Tattoo informs us that one of its objects is to show the civilian population modern military machinery in operation, and it may be that the intention is to warn us against its use rather than to inspire fervour. If that is true, it is regrettable that it was not made plainer; but we are afraid that this interpretation is over-generous. Had such been the intention, it is probably not beyond the scope of a Tattoo to show a life-like picture of a military hospital the day after a bombardment, or the picture of the position of the defeated party at the end of an abortive attack, with a parade of mutilated men and their families and an unemployment queue to see such spectacles, and their absence induces us to look for the reason in another place.

There is one more aspect which must be kept in mind. We are told that the Tattoo is designed to raise money for military and local charities. We trust that the public will remember that it is shortly to be followed by Poppy Day when, in addition to the solemn remembrance of those who fell for an ideal which their successors show every sign of betraying basely, we shall subscribe to acquit our debts then contracted towards the broken survivors. We have not yet paid for the last war; when we have done so, and when we have compared what we gained with the cost and found it worth while, then it will be time enough to consider another slaughter.

HERRIOT AVERTS THREAT TO GOVERNMENT

Nantes, Oct. 28. The threat to the Government, due to the Radical Socialists' opposition to M. Doumergue's constitutional reform proposals, has been averted by the action of M. Herriot.

Addressing the Radical-Socialist Congress, M. Herriot appealed for the preservation of the party truce, and concluded: "I've only one word to add... January 18, 1935. The Sanr Plebiscite!"

M. Herriot's warning was decisive and the Congress decided almost unanimously to preserve the party truce, on which the present Ministry was founded, but authorised the Radical Ministers to negotiate a compromise with the Premier, M. Doumergue.—Reuter.

HO YING-CHING MAY GO TO SECHUEN

Peiping, Oct. 28. It is learned in political circles that the visit of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek here is likely to result in changes in certain high Government posts in North China.

General Yu Hsueh-chung might be transferred to the command of the anti-Red forces in Hupei leaving the governorship of Hupei to be filled by Mr. Yuan Liang, now Mayor of Peiping, or General Shuen-Chien.

The Generalissimo is reported to have the intention of transferring General Ho Ying-ching, Chairman of the Peiping Military Council, to Sechuen and assigning him the supreme command of the anti-Red forces of that province.—Central News Agency.

POPULAR COUPLE.

MISS BETTY MOSS WEDS MR. W. STOKER

A wedding of great local interest was that solemnised at St. John's Cathedral on Saturday afternoon when Miss Nellie (Betty) Moss became the bride of Mr. William Stoker, the Rev. H. W. Baines officiating at the ceremony.

The bride, who is well-known and popular, is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Moss, while the bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. A. E. and Mrs. Stoker of Harrogate and York, England.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, wore an ivory lace gown and silk lace wedding gown by "Eunice," the splendour of the bride complementing the new all-seeing train which was dotted with clusters of orange blossoms. A halo of orange blossoms and crystals held her Brunette net veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses from which fell ivory satin ribbons each terminating in a large white rose.

The bride was attended by the Misses Dorothy Moss, Raymond Blackmore and Dorice Brooks who were bridesmaids. They carried a bouquet of white roses in blue and white. The bridesmaids wore a blue and white dress with a white sash. The bridesmaids carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Victoria Moss, the bride's youngest sister, was train-bearer. She was attired in an early Victorian dress and halo of hand-made flowers in blue and white. Her dress was dotted with rosebuds on similar lines to that of the bride.

Mrs. Moss wore a deep violet georgette gown also by "Eunice," trimmed with poodles, set off with a hat to match trimmed with the same flowers. She carried a bag of violet fluted georgette to harmonize.

The duties of best man were undertaken by Mr. A. L. Fisher, who appropriate music was rendered on the organ by Mr. Frederick Mason.

After the wedding ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Stoker left for the reception which was held at the Hongkong Electric Recreation Club, North Point. In which they left for the Club, was a cupid doll, dressed in a "Eunice" gown, on the same lines as that of the bride.

A large number of friends were present at the reception and after the usual speeches and toasts, the happy couple left for their honeymoon which is being spent at Cheung Chau. Mrs. Stoker, on leaving, wore a "Eunice" ensemble of deep hydrangea blue corded velvet with hat, bag and shoes to tone.

INDIAN CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM

London, Oct. 23.

Many weeks of the new Parliamentary session will be occupied in the House of Commons by discussion of the Government proposals for Indian Constitutional Reform, which was described last night by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in a speech at York, as constituting one of the most difficult, most complex and anxious problems ever set to any nation in the whole history of the world.

Mr. Chamberlain said these proposals would be comprised in a vast bill containing perhaps between 350 and 400 clauses. The question had been the subject of most exhaustive and repeated inquiries and examination. He deeply regretted that the subject had been the occasion of serious differences of opinion in the Conservative Party. Without the danger of aggravating such differences, he could say that affairs in India could not be left as they were. There was no dispute about that.

The only question to decide was how fast and how far they were prepared to go in the direction of helping India towards self-government. In the circumstances, it was perhaps very fortunate that they were going to have a report on the whole matter from a joint select committee, which included men of ripe experience and well tried judgment.

Those who could not claim to be specialists on India affairs would desire to be guided by the recommendations of the joint Select Committee. They would be reporting in a few weeks and he urged that people would not make up their minds before hearing what they had to say on the subject.—British Wireless.

Placing the Responsibility.

London, Oct. 27.

In a speech near Portsmouth by the Attorney General, Sir Thomas Inskip said that if they were going to have a Federal Government in India they could not possibly divert responsibility at the centre from it. It was impossible to have a Federal Government and no power and no responsibility. He did not claim that the Government proposals were infallible, but, as to their general nature, as ground upon which to work, he believed them to be the best that had been devised.—British Wireless.

BOARD OF EDUCATION. SPLIT BAMBOO STICK.

SYSTEM OF TECHNICAL EDUCATION CONSIDERED

USED FOR STEALING FROM LETTER BOXES

The 93rd meeting of the Board of Education was held on Friday afternoon at 4.15 p.m. Members present were:—The Director of Education, Mr. G. R. Sayer, B.A., Chairman; Senior Inspector of English Schools, Mr. A. R. Sutherland, I.S.O., M.A.; Senior Inspector of Vernacular Schools, Mr. Y. P. Law, B.A.; Mr. A. el Arculli, Mr. L. D'Almeida e Castro, Jr., Sir W. W. Hornell, K.T., C.I.E., M.A., LL.D.; Hon. Mr. S. W. Tao, O.B.E., LL.B.; Mr. B. Wyllie.

The Board considered a general scheme for the inauguration of a system of Technical Education as outlined in the Report dated September 1934 of the Principal, Junior Technical School.

It was decided to adjourn the matter for further consideration. A scheme for instituting a temporary exchange of European teachers between those employed in the United Kingdom and in the Colonial Dependencies was considered.

Detective - Inspector K. W. Andrew stated that the defendant was with another man who escaped. The detective kept them under observation through several streets and they were seen trying to extract contents from letter boxes at many houses.

"This type of larceny is very serious because, these people can get into possession of documents concerning banking transactions abroad," said the Inspector.

"Defendant admitted a previous conviction in 1929 for stealing and was fined $250 or in default three months' hard labour."

HALF AN HOUR OF BRILLIANT FOOTBALL: THEN—

Caroline Hill Game Degenerates Into Scramble

SOCCER SNIPS

CLUB WORTH A POINT

NAVY WILL YET IMPROVE

(By "Veritas").

RIGHT now South China are sitting on top of the world. From their exalted perch at the head of the first division of the club's two teams sharing the honour with the same number of points, they are regarded as the rest of the opposition with perfect sang froid. Neither team has yet lost a match, and although the second string have conceded a couple of drawn games, they are not perturbed, for they still remain in the position to shield their senior outfit, who have secured the maximum reward from four encounters.

THE Club did very well to hold South China "B" to a division of spoils, and the fact that if chances had been accepted they might have won, does not alter the other side of the question that if the Chinese had done likewise, THEY might have won. Not a draw was the only fitting result of such a match, where defence outshone attack, and two goalkeepers walked off the field with halves around their heads.

BOTH teams seemed over-anxious to do their best, which accounted for periods of mediocre play. The cool work of Popker, Syd. Strange and Fote-Hunt were features of the game, while Wong Wai-kai's goal-keeping, and Lai Sul-wing's forceful work in the attack added colour to South China's display.

AT the moment, the Navy are languishing at the foot of the league table, but methinks they will not take very long to climb out of this invidious position. They had to lose to the Borders, because the "24th" were just those two goals better, but the sailors' play was sufficiently promising to allay any feelings of apprehension regarding the immediate future of the team. They will win several matches yet, but they need at least another fortnight together before they can face the leading sides with absolute confidence.

INCIDENTALLY they will be creating no precedent by indulging in a little shooting practice. Probably one of the most unfortunate features of football is that goals count. Ask Chinese Athletic!

EAST Lancashire are beginning to justify the claim I made for them a month ago. I beat St. Joseph's by such a decisive margin as 4-1 indicates one thing: that the East Lancs. are a good team. They were better than the Saints in the following phases—ball control, footwork, understanding, plan of attack, defence, and man-ship.

IF the Police were not so unfair to themselves they would be one of the best teams in the league. But inconstancy is their intermediate name, and consequently they can always be expected to remain in the middle of the league table from the beginning to the end of the season. THEY won their first match of the season on Saturday, and picked on the Recreo for the achievement. Well, there's courage in a thing like that, for even without A. V. Lussano, the Recreo are not to be lightly regarded. And Beltrino returned to the team this week.

YET the Police were by far the better team. Solidity in defence and enterprise in attack went hand in hand to beat the Portuguese by the odd goal in three. The margin could have been bigger. In the words of the illustrious Charlie Chan: humbly surging honours in the forward line, and generous giving of ball to Johnson not always rewarded with proper success.

YESTERDAY gave me my first opportunity this season of seeing the Chinese Athletic in action. General impressions can be gathered by the adjoining report of their match with South China. In extenso, however, it might be added that I think the Athletic have a team second only to South China in skill and precision.

TO play the Caroline Hill seniors at their own game, and up to a point beat them, is a pretty worthy achievement. The Athletic have proved they are capable of doing this. Furthermore it is quite obvious that their lamentable shooting failure yesterday is but a temporary phase. They rattled up ten goals the week before, and seven in their two preceding matches.

THERE is no weakness in the attack, and the inside trio are positively brilliant. The half backs are sound, with only one obvious shortcoming. The wing halves have a decided tendency to concentrate in the middle of the field, leaving the opposing wingers too much room. So far as I can see the two backs need only to form themselves into a really first class defence. Sul in goal is quite resourceful.

WHILE the Athletic can field this team they are bound to remain among the leaders. I think I can see them beating South China "B" at least holding the Borders to a draw, and scoring a number of very decisive victories. Yesterday's team strikes me as being the best they have turned out for three seasons.

ATHLETIC OUGHT TO HAVE WON

Better Than South China For Most Of Match

REFEREE'S DRASTIC ACTION

(By "Veritas")

FOR 30 minutes yesterday, a huge concourse at Caroline Hill numbering some 6,000 watched with growing excitement the best display of football since South China and Borders played their historic match last season. Then Li Tin-sang was dramatically sent off the field, and instantly the game degenerated into a series of inconclusive and ineffective raids and counter raids, Chinese Athletic doing everything but score, and South China, left so helpless as to be able to do practically nothing else but watch their opponents do everything but score.

That South China eventually won by the odd goal in three is cause for some congratulation on their part; never theless the Athletic, insulted themselves by permitting such a result. They could have won two or three times over. In the parlance of the popular stands, they "jazzed round" South China. But when it came to shoot—

They missed a penalty, but that was only one of a dozen opportunities wasted. It only needed the slightest degree of initiative and enterprise to break down the South China defence, and this was particularly emphasised in the closing stages, when, for ten minutes on end the ball was never out of the homeaters' half.

INTOLERABLY IRRITATING.

The object failure of the Athletic forwards in front of goal became intolerably irritating when one studied their highly polished mid-field play. In the words of the ingenious both in conception and effect, constantly leaving Leung Wing-ching and his colleagues running round in circles. But once within the penalty area the attacks flizzed out.

Full credit must be given to South China for stout-hearted defending, but at the same time they were greatly aided by the Athletic, who attempted to carry their inter-passing campaign too far and to dribble the ball into the goal. If half a dozen first time, on-the-mark shots had been fired in during the last twenty minutes, I have no doubt that the result would have been reversed.

Happily one is able to recall that first half. It was cram full of really fine football. The teams were evenly matched, with the Athletic enjoying a slight edge in passing, and South China balancing on pace and additional speed. Both attacks kept the play open, and Ho Ka-keung vied successfully with Fung King-chung in his brilliant angle passes to the wings. Once in the first half he sent out a 40 yards ground pass to Li Hung-ching which was about as perfect a piece of ball distribution as one could imagine.

LEADING PLAYERS.

Team work on both sides was excellent, and it says much for the defences that during this period only one goal was scored. Up to the time best back on view, although one could find no fault with either Mak Chiu-han or Tsui Ah-fai the Athletic rear-guard.

Leung Chui-wing and Lai Kwok-chiu, playing at centre half for South China and the Athletic respectively were magnificent. Leung was occasionally lured into making false tackles by the subtle passing between the Athletic's three forwards, and his recoveries were so well timed, and his headwork so effective, that rarely was he completely out-manoeuvred.

Li's insistent shadowing of Fung King-chung and Ip Pak-wah very nearly caused the disintegration of this famous partnership. It was a case of them both getting rid of the ball, and getting rid of it quickly, if they were to make any ground and salvage the attack from utter disruption. All of which tended to increase the speed of the exchanges and thereby to add excitement. When finally South China opened their account through Tam Koi-pak's head, the goal was no surprise, for it was plain that such persistent pressure as was being applied against both defences, must in time lead to goals.

But after that goal, there was really only one team in it so far as the first half was concerned. The Athletic set up a series of brilliant, conceived attacks, two of which culminated in Fung King-mul clearing the cross-bar with rasping drives, and others in fierce scrambles and fine counter-attacks. Li Tin-sang and Lau Mau.

DISTASTEFUL INCIDENT.

In the course of ten minutes South China's goal morally fell at least three times, but was in actuality reprieved through the inability of Ho Ka-keung, Au Ping-ming, and Au Kam-fung to shoot. Then came the very distasteful incident which not only made an unhappy curtain to the first half, but was the signal for a general falling off in the standard of play.

A hot scrimmage on South China's goal line was abruptly stopped by the referee's whistle, and to everyone's astonishment, the official was seen taking Li Tin-sang's name and pointing his finger to the dressing room.

As far as could be seen (and I was only six yards behind the goal at the time), Li jumped on one of the Athletic forwards. It was a foul, of course, but hardly one which I expected to see receive such severe punishment.

To complete an inexplicable action, the referee, instead of awarding a penalty, which presumably the foul called for, if it was sufficiently bad to deserve a player being sent off the field, penalised the Athletic for apparently fouling Wong Wing, the goalkeeper, which here again it was difficult to appreciate the decision, as Wong retained the ball, and in consequence became the natural target for the Athletic forwards.

Just prior to this Tay Qua-tong has been badly injured, and South China led the first half with nine men.

SOUTH CHINA'S SECOND GOAL.

Tay returned in the second half, but was quite useless as he had to hobble about on the wing, and during this period South China could not be regarded as more than nine strong. Fung King-chung dropped back to take over Li's duties, and fulfilled them with pronounced success. The half backs also concentrated on defence, and it was this packing-off of the goal which upset the Athletic.

They dominated the remainder of the play, yet, thanks to a blunder by Mak Chiu-han and Sui Tim-lin, found themselves another goal in arrears before the second half was very old. Mak allowed Tsui Kwai-shing too much rope, and at inside right carried the ball along to the goal-line and centred squarely. Sui, the goalkeeper shaped very badly for the ball, saw it beat him, and Ip Pak-wah had only to run in and net a yard from goal.

The goal stung the Athletic into combined endeavour, but most of this line and the penalty area. It allowed them to indulge in pattern-weaving, but nothing came of such tactics. Finally, when Au Kam-fung, entrusted with a penalty, sent high over the bar, one felt that the last thing the Athletic wanted to do was to score.

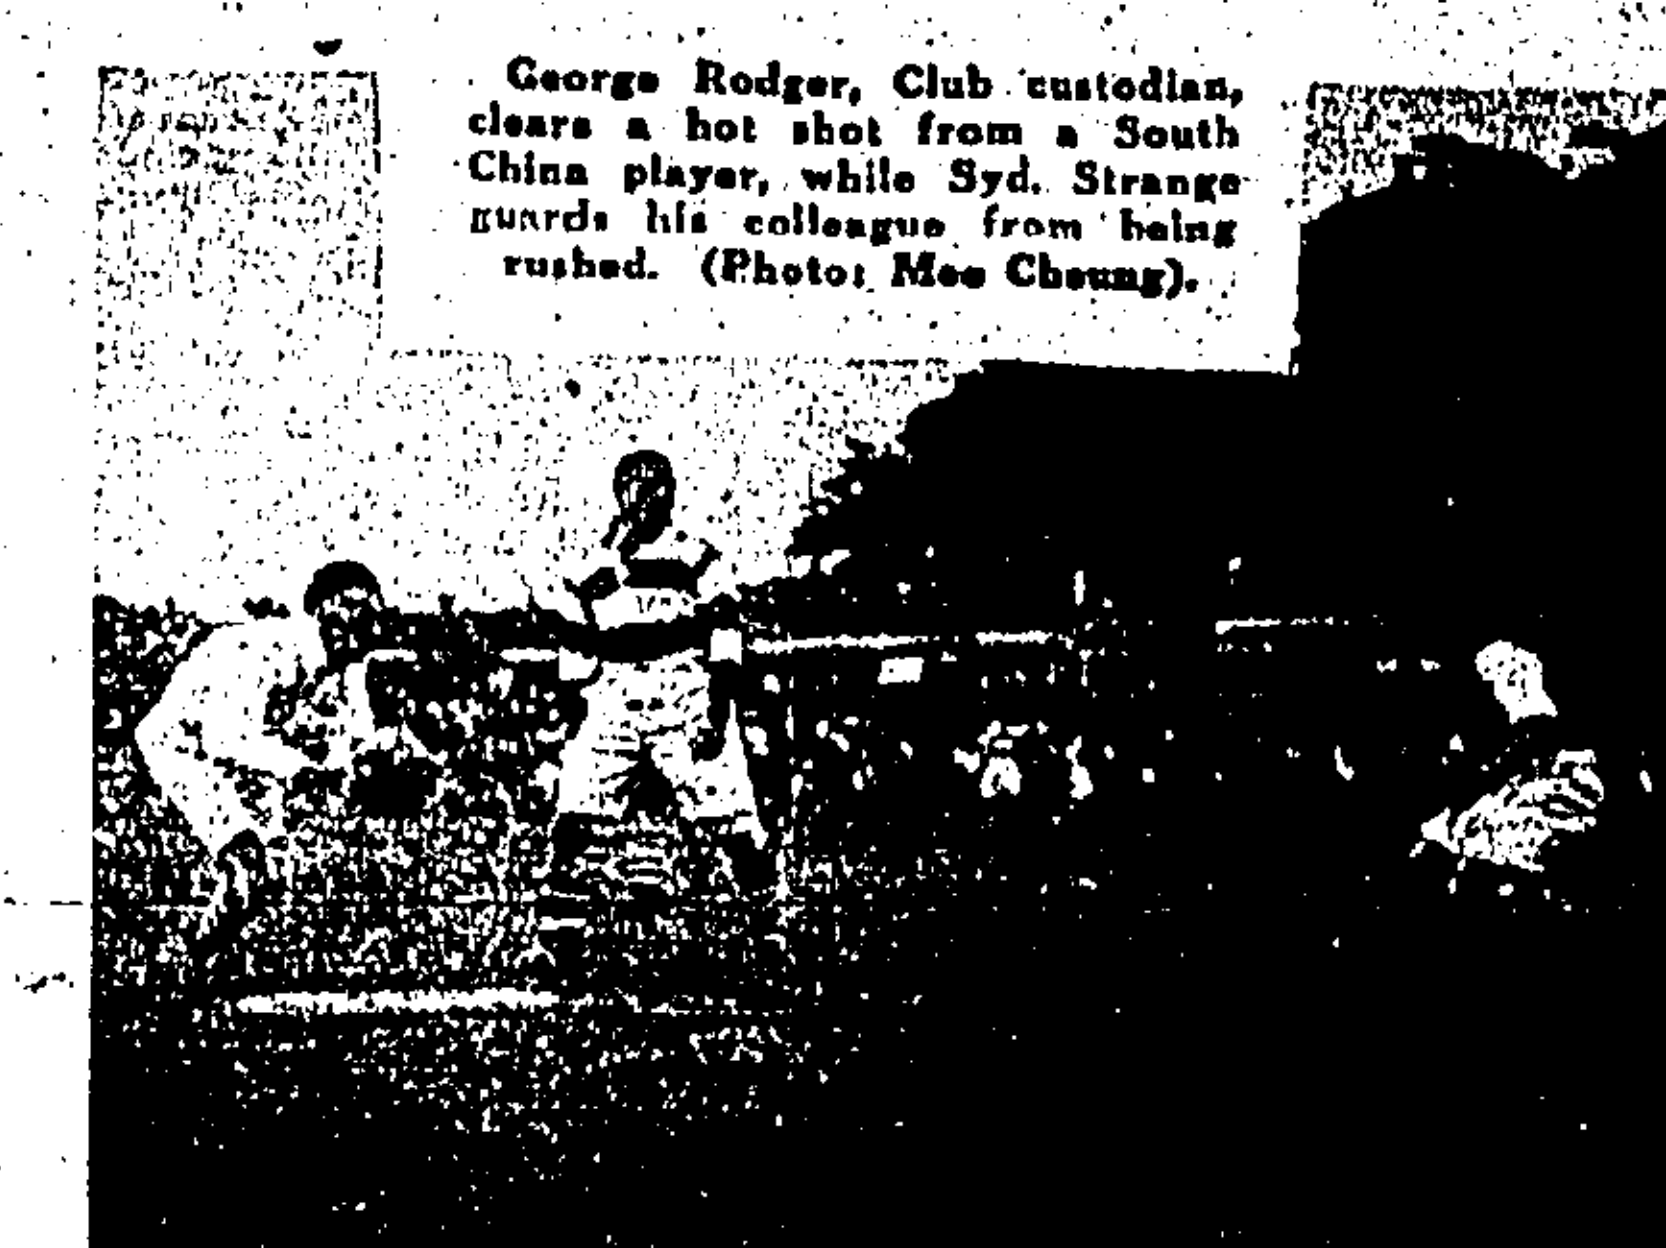

Au Kam-fung eventually found the net, and right to the end South China were desperately defending. But by this time the football was all rather unimpressive.

THE upshot of the week-end results was that only seven teams in the three divisions now remain unbeaten. Three of them figure in the first division and three in the second. The two South China teams and the Club seniors, Lincoln, Royal Artillery and South China in the second division and the Air Force in the third.

Back in his home town after his first season as a professional, Ellsworth Vines declared playing professional tennis is a "hard life."

"Professional tennis is much harder than the amateur game because one has to play almost every night and in different towns on unfamiliar courts," the former national champion said.

When asked if amateur tennis did not have certain advantages over the professional game, he replied, "None. The only City youth, who has been several months with the "Tennis Tour," refused to reveal how much he has earned. However, he has been reported to have made $45,000 this

REPORTS have it that A. V. Gossano will not be donning his studded boots again this season. I hope the belief is ill-founded. Local football without the inimitable "A. V." is like a loaf of bread without yeast. Besides the interper is coming, and we are not overstocked with eligible centre-forwards.

Vines Compares Professional And Amateur Tennis

Back in his home town after his first season as a professional, Ellsworth Vines declared playing professional tennis is a "hard life."

Bright Cricket Last Saturday

With most of the wickets playing easily, scoring was fairly high in local cricket during the week-end, nevertheless of the five league matches played, only two were left drawn.

Alec Pearce and Owen-Hughes ran into batting form for the Club against Civil Service in the only first division game, but dogged batting by Perry, Jarrow, Woon and Baker allowed the government servants to earn a draw. G. R. Wynne, recognised as the Sam Isaacs of Hongkong cricket, contributed another hurricane knock for the Police against the University, and won the match for the officers in spectacular fashion.

K.C.C. COLLAPSE.

A remarkable game was seen at the K.C.C., where the second string lost to the R.A.M.C. by four runs. With the ball kicking awkwardly, batsmen were constantly at fault in timing, and Trimble, taking advantage of this, bowled magnificently after an indifferent start, to capture 7 wickets for 37 runs.

After dismissing the Medicals for 89, of which Major Bonavia hit up 41, the K.C.C. put themselves well on the road to victory by scoring 40 for the first wicket. With half the side out the homeaters still only needed some 20 runs to win, but the later batsmen offered no resistance, and when Mulvihy left to a very doubtful l.b.w. decision, the defeat of the K.C.C. was assured.

Bonavia took a brilliant one-handed catch in the slips to dismiss Jones, while F. E. Lawrence also brought off two smart slip catches for the K.C.C.

Leading performances in the league were:

CAER CLARK AND MAMAK LEAGUE HOCKEY

ALLISON
AND
DAVIS-CUPPLAYER MAKES STATEMENTSAYS WILL NOT PLAY AGAIN

New York.
Wilmer Allison, the Texan who is certain to get the American No. 1 tennis ranking this year on the strength of his sensational play at Forest Hills, has put himself on record as saying he wants no further part of the Davis Cup business, but there is already a movement on foot to make him the playing captain of the 1935 team.

The captaincy, involving a great deal of judgment and organizing ability, has been a bone of contention now ever since the days of the Tilden-Johnson team, which didn't need a captain as long as it was supreme on the international courts. Bernon Prentice, a pleasant New York business man who handles tennis affairs for the Seabright club as a hobby, retired under more or less fire after captaining the 1933 team. He was succeeded by Dick Williams, a former Davis Cup star himself, but the defeat of the latest American campaign abroad has stirred up reports that all was not as serene as it should have been with our lads abroad.

ADMIRABLE DOUBLES CHOICE.

"There's no use in stating the reasons for the failure of Prentice and Williams," writes George Carrens in the Boston Transcript, "giving the players as the cause of international tennis on the disintegration during the last few years. They didn't bring the team to the proper pitch for the vital test because they simply didn't have the gumption to carry through their assignment in a manner that would get the desired results."

Allison, it is known, wishes to step out, unannounced, will be strongly considered. The Texan has the advantage of experience and knowledge of current Davis Cup conditions. He might not be a good choice for the stakes in 1935, despite his superb performance at home after a fruitless trip abroad at the call of Captain Williams, but he certainly would fit in well as a doubles mate for George Lott if it develops that Sidney Wood and Lester Stollen can be built up again for the individual assignments.

ST. ANDREW'S LADIES
BEAT RECREIOERRATIC SHOOTING BY BOTH
SETS OF FORWARDSH.M.S. KEPPEL LOSE FAST GAME
TO THE SAINTS

The St. Andrew's Club Ladies, runners-up in the Caer Clark Cup hockey competition for the past five years, defeated the Club de Recreio Ladies by three goals to one in their first Cup match played on the Marina ground on Saturday afternoon. The shooting of both forward lines was erratic.

At the interval, the Saints led by two goals to one. M. Woolley netting both goals, while C. Botelho scored for the Portuguese team. Early in the second half, P. Gittins, playing at inside-left, netted the Saints' third point.

E. Xavier, centre-half, M. Basto and C. Botelho were the outstanding players for the Recreio. M. Berrux, J. Wong and L. L. Woolley, the Saints' intermediate line, formed the crux of their defence strength. G. Kroutsakaya, a newcomer to the forward line, gave an impressive display.

The teams lined up as follows:
St. Andrew's Ladies: Miss L. Rose, Miss G. White, E. Landolt, J. Woolley, J. Wong, Miss M. Gritux, Misses P. Wong, G. Kroutsakaya, P. Gittins and M. Churn.

MAMAK TOURNAMENT

St. Andrew's Beat H.M.S.
Keppel In Fast Game

A fast and gruelling hockey match in the Mamak Tournament was witnessed on the Police Training School ground yesterday afternoon, when St. Andrew's Club defeated H.M.S. Keppel by five goals to three, after being three goals to one in arrears at the interval.

Mid-hitting on the part of the Saints' defenders let the visitors through and they obtained their first goal early through Lieut. Sinclair-Ford. Shortly after, Smith, accepting a good wing pass, found the net. Muir, the left wing, scored the third goal. Wong, in goal mis-kicking.

The Saints retaliated, but their forward line could not penetrate the goal when in the scoring region. Gitter did not make the most of a penalty bully awarded the Saints for a foul by one of the Keppel defenders.

R. Carroll, who was doing good work on the left wing, eventually scored for the Saints before half-time.

In the second half, the Saints attacked, continuously and Carroll found the net to score the second goal. E. F. Fincher netted the equalizer and towards the end, Fincher gave the Saints the lead as the result of a penalty bully caused by a Keppel defender kicking the ball in the do.

Before the end Fincher completed his hat trick and made the Saints' victory certain.

The Keppel kept the Saints' defence on the move in the closing stages of the game, but the Saints' goalkeeper prevented many promising attacks from bearing fruit.

K.I.T.C. DEFEAT SIGNALS.

Leading 4-0 at one stage of the game, the Kowloon Indian Tennis Club just managed to snatch two points from the Royal Corps of Signals by the odd goal in seven in a Mamak Tournament match played on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon.

Gurbachan Singh, formerly of the Radio, and who is this season playing for the Kowloon Indians, scored their first two goals within a few minutes. Hassan and Noronha brought the total to four. Before half-time was

CHAPTER XLII

Boots awakened in the gray Christmas dawn, yawning sleepily in tractor and truck, surrounded by streams of rainwater. A hail-noried sun lamed through the clouds and she walked to church beside Miss Florida, along the frost rimmed pavement. The well-worn familiar road, the country beyond the hills, seemed so distant. It was as if she had gone some months before. The Kuehnens walked now, whatever their destination.

It was really the first time since Boots' return that she had ventured alone to the local community here. Several people nodded to her cordially. After the service Isabel whispered swiftly, "You're coming to my tea this afternoon, without fail!"

"I'm expecting a caller from town,"

Isabel dimpled significantly. "Bring him along. I'm dying to meet him." She squeezed her friend's arm with the old wistful pressure. "Try to make about your young man, he said with archness."

Boots said perhaps she would con. So she didn't know, really, what Edward's plans would be. He was dining with the family and would drive out later. Edward was a solid, sensible fellow, but he had no heart. He was all reliability and honest worth.

When he did arrive, smiling and big and hearty, with his resounding kins and his own particular scent of tobacco, he told her that he had a lot of things to talk to her about.

"These are too lovely," she told him, touching the pearls with a caressing finger. She had already thanked him for the pearls, but he had repeated out reassuringly. She should have finer things than these and very soon, too, he assured her.

"Seen Denis?" he asked after a moment. She steeled herself to reply.

"Yes. He dropped in last night."
"How? the old boy?"
"Oh, all right, I guess." Why must he remind her of Denis at this moment? But he was finished with that topic for the time, at least. He had to tell her he was going to speak. Could she be ready by January 7th? There was a ship sailing then—just the trip he had planned for her.
Boots laced her slin. fingers unlocked them. When she looked up, she was smiling. This was the best way out of her difficulties, surely. And the sooner it was done the better!

"All right. The seventh."
"You darling!" Edward was rarely demonstrative but to-day his voice trembled. He took her chin between thumb and forefinger, tilting it gently.
"You won't be sorry," he told her. "We'll go places and do things. I'll be so proud of you."

Her mother came in and there were effusive thanks for the game and the jellies and the fruit cake and the avocados. Boots, sitting apart, admired his manner with the older woman, his quiet deference.

"He's good. He's kind," she assured herself. "What more does any girl want?"

It would be a haven for her—this safe, wise, honourable marriage. Sylvia would never look past her unseeingly again, nor would Boots' mother worry over bills. The girl clung to these thoughts. They assuaged her.

Presently she and Edward went for a walk in the mill air. The early morning promise of sun had faded and a slow fog was seeping in from the shore. The horns blew unceasingly.

"'Sunny Christmas weather!' Boots shivered in her coat, huddling the fur collar closer under her chin. She had an indefinite sense of unrest. Her limbs were stretched at high tension.

"'You're cold.' Edward gave her a concerned look. 'Better take you back.' He had one big, gloved hand under her chin, piloting her back. The rain was falling, but the faintly oily dampness the fog always brought. They stopped at an intersection and a car zoomed past them with eerie quiet in the gray swirl of mist blowing in from the Sound.

"'You're cold, aren't you?' the girl said on a note of hysterical laughter. 'I never saw such fog. And on this,

People loomed suddenly close to them as they crossed. A father steered two red-capped and mitted children, chattering excitedly. "Good thing we didn't drive," Edward muttered. "You can't even see the turns." A headlight flashed close to them and was instantly swallowed up in the mist.

Presently, Boots thought, chattering with relief, they would turn in at Isabel's doorway. All this darkness and dimness would be swallowed up in the warmth of candlelight and daylight. There would be reassuring laughter and healing cure.

"I don't know why I mind this so," she said on a shiver that told her she was making a terrible nervous. "Careful there!" She hadn't even seen the curb. Houses, shrubs, fences, gates—all were swallowed up in the horrible, all-enveloping grayness and blankness. She heard the faint murmur of a crowd and the arm flung up to shield her. It seemed then that she was slipping, slipping, slipping downward.

When she came to she was on a dark couch in a brightly lighted room. There were murmuring voices somewhat hazy and indistinct. A man in spectacles came to stand over her. "All right, now!"

"Better take it easy. You're all right but you've had a nasty shock."

"She said faintly, 'Edward?'
"The young man's a bit knocked up," the doctor told her cheerfully. "We've taken him down to the hospital for X-rays. I'm Dr. La Farge and you're in my office in the Plantain Apartments. I'll have you taken home after a while when you're sure you've lost that fuzzy feeling."
She closed her eyes. "For the moment she seemed too shaken to question him further. Just what "knocked up" might mean, uttered in that cheerful tone, she did not dare to ask. Doctors were notably optimistic when discussing such matters with another patient.

She lay back, spent. Edward was hurt and she herself badly shaken, although the doctor assured her there were no bones broken. Mr. Van Sciver, he had added, shading his voice to the proper note of respect for that golden name, had thrown himself in front of Boots. His hip appeared to have sustained a slight fracture, although the car had not passed over him.

Mr. Van Sciver had been conscious, she was told. He had insisted that Dr. La Farge take charge. Mr. Van Sciver had said that Mrs. Macburn was not to be alarmed and had instructed them to telephone a friend of his—a Mr. Fenway, said the doctor, glancing at a pencilled memorandum in his hand. Mr. Fenway would be here directly.

Denis came in a moment later. The colour came up in Boots' face. "Where's Edward?"

"At the New Martin Hospital," she told him simply. "Ho—he was very brave, Denis. He saved my life."
He was watching her intently.
"Ho—Edward and I are going to be married soon after the first of the year," she went on rapidly. "I—I thought I ought to tell you."

There was a brief silence. "Thanks. I'm glad to know it. It—it simplifies things, somehow."

She did not glance his way nor ask him what he meant.

"So will you, after you take me home, go down to the hospital and see exactly how things are? See what he needs and then let his people know? His mother—his mother will be simply furious," Boots finished, tears standing at last in her eyes. "She's not—particularly wild about me anyhow, although she's been decent enough. But she will be bound to think it's all my fault."

"Of course I'll go," Denis said, answering the first part of her sentence and politely ignoring the second. "Think you can stand?"

She tried it, gladly. Dr. La

Fargo's mirror showed a blue bruise on her forehead. "I'm a—a pretty sight for Christmas."

Much later, in her own room, with the lamps lighted and Miss Florida fussing over her gently with hot recalled the look Denis had given her at that moment. Recalled it and put it quickly away. It was Edward she must think of now. A hip fracture,

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solution to Previous Contract Problem.

By W. E. McKenney

There are many people who will never become good bridge players, and bear in mind that I do not believe there is any such thing as card sense.

Card sense in poker is having brains enough to quit staving on every little pair you get when the cards are running against you.

I believe that any person intelligent enough to be successful in his own line of work can learn how to play a good game of bridge.
However, the reason a lot of people will not learn how to play bridge is because they depend upon luck, rather than careful study and good play. To-day's hand is an example.

West's double of four hearts is bad. His partner has made a weak overcall of one spade. I would say that the West player, holding this hand, should be thankful that his opponents got into a four-heart contract. The double might give too much information.

The Play

East's opening lead was the deuce of clubs. I might say right here that, with a diamond opening, the contract can be defeated. The seven of clubs was played from the dummy, but West refused to go up with the queen. North winning the trick with the ace.

North then cashed the king of clubs. A small heart came next.
West winning the trick with the king. West returned a spade and East allowed dummy's queen to win.

A small club was returned, West was forced to play his queen and the declarer ruffed with the four of hearts. He then led the ten of spades, East winning with the ace.

East led the nine of diamonds and West played the deuce, North winning the trick with the ace.
A small heart was played, West making a nice move by refusing to win the trick and playing the seven of hearts. Declarer led the good jack of clubs from dummy.
West refused to ruff, discarding the six of diamonds, and declarer discarded the four of diamonds.

The king of spades was played next, West discarding another diamond, and the declarer made a nice play by trumping his good trick with the six of hearts. A diamond was returned and won in dummy with the king and now the declarer has the ten-eight of hearts over West's ace-nine.

The lead is in dummy, and regardless of what is played, West must ruff and declarer is bound to

THE RIVER NILE.

INTERESTING LECTURE AT THE UNIVERSITY

Under the auspices of the Arts Association of the Hongkong University Professor W. Brown gave a lecture last Friday on "The River Nile." Room K of the University has seen many lectures but rarely has such a large audience been so magnificently entertained. The lecture was illustrated with photographs largely of Professor Brown's own taking.

To start with, Prof. Brown pointed out that the Nile, while it was neither the longest river, nor the one with the greatest amount of water, was certainly by far the most interesting in the world from a geographical and human point of view, and mentioned that he had spent a strenuous month in exploring its four thousand miles from source to mouth. A small part of this journey had to be done by train, bus, or car since some parts of the river were not navigable.

Starting off from Mombasa, in what is now Kenya Colony, he proceeded to Nairobi, famous for its wild life, including many kinds of antelopes and gazelles, lions and hyaenas, zebras and giraffes, ostriches and cranes. From Nairobi he made his way by the railway, much of which has just been newly completed, to Kampala, the capital of Uganda, a picturesque, spacious, and healthy town. This was the starting point for a 1200-mile motor-tour through Uganda, across Lake Albert into Belgian Congo; and by the Ituri Forest on the west bank of the famous Ruwenzori Range, where were seen the African pigmies and the ugly duck-billed women, to Lake Kivu called by some of the "gem of Africa". Turning back north here through the still active volcanic region of the Mt. Ruwenzori, Prof. Brown went by the east side of the Ruwenzori Range to Fort Portal and back to Kampala. At various points on this trip and elsewhere, the Great Rift Valley which cuts across this part of Africa was crossed.

The River Journey.

After some more cross-country travel by car, train, and boat from Kampala by Jinja and Butiaba to the head of Lake Albert, Prof. Brown started his river journey.

TELEPHONE SYSTEM.

CONNECTING SHANGHAI AND CANTON

Nanking, Oct. 28. With the arrival here of Mr. Tang Chung-yao, representative of the Construction Department of the Canton Government talks have commenced regarding the construction of a long distance telephone system connecting Shanghai and Canton, to be connected later with the existing Shanghai-Nanking telephone system.

As soon as the details of this project are completed, work will be commenced.—Central News Agency.

first making a detour to the amazing Murchison Falls where the Victoria Nile surges through a narrow defile. This country is swarming with game of all kinds—both bird and animal life; great hippopotami dozing in the cool water and crocodiles in thousands basking on the banks, ready to slip into the water at the least unusual noise. The first part of the journey from Lake Albert to Nimule was made by the steamer Lugard—called after Lord Lugard, former Governor of Hongkong and a well-known administrator of Africa—then by car to Juba and by steamer to Khartoum, famous for its memories of "Chinese" Gordon. On this section, the Nile makes its way through what is virtually marsh and a path has to be cleared through the great masses of floating vegetation called sud. Then by Wadi-Halfa through lovely stretches of river scenery to Assuan where stands the ancient temple of Philae, which is now completely submerged when the great Assuan dam is closed to open up the Nile's waters when in flood.

To complete his lecture Prof. Brown showed a drawing to scale of the Great Pyramid near Cairo and beside it the main building of the University. This demonstrated most vividly the stupendous size of the Pyramid which the lecturer pointed out, was a thousand years older to Alexander than Alexander was to us.

Mr. M. A. Cooper thanked Prof. Brown for his delightful lecture and proposed a vote of thanks which was heartily given.

BOY SCOUT RALLY.

SECOND COMPETITION FOR PRINCE OF WALES BANNER

Over 260 boys attended the second Boy Scouts Rally for the Prince of Wales Banner in the grounds of St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, on Saturday afternoon. The rally was the biggest that has been held in Hongkong for a considerable period, and proved a success in every way.

District Scoutmaster R. Dormer, who is acting Commissioner, was in charge of the rally, while Mr. Stephen Mitchell was the chief examiner. The Rev. N. V. Halward, Colony Commissioner, was unable to attend owing to indisposition.

The following were the competitions:—Whipping the end of a rope; Making a fire and boiling a pint of water; Morse Signalling; Kim's game; and a Troop competition.

The troop competition saw teams of 12 Scouts building a lean-to shelter, flag-staff, and tripod entirely out of scout-staves. At the end each team had to fly a flag from its flag staff.

The results of the afternoon's events were reported to be very satisfactory, but will not be available for a day or two.

The final Rally, which will be held on December 1 at Sai Wan, will decide the winner of the banner.

The troops present on Saturday were:—1st, Hongkong Sea Scout; 2nd, H.K.; 7th, H.K.; 10th, H.K.; 13th, H.K.; 16th, H.K.; 1st, Kowloon; 6th, Kowloon; 6th, Kowloon and 11th, Kowloon.

BLIND GIRLS' TREAT.

ENJOYABLE PICNIC AT SHEK O BEACH

The annual outing of the girls of the Blind Home to Shek O beach was held on Saturday afternoon, when about 60 inmates spent an enjoyable time. The picnic was arranged by the Kowloon Tong branch of the Victoria Diocesan and Missionary Association.

Seventeen motor cars were placed at the disposal of the organizers to convey the girls.

On their return home, the girls were served with a special dinner.

The organizers wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of the picnic by donations and the loan of their motor-cars.

FILMLAND NEWS

Advance Contracts for British Films

KORDA CAMPAIGN

The autumn sales campaign for this year's roster of London Film Productions, which has just been completed, reveals that 10,000 contracts have already been secured in advance on such films as H. G. Wells' "Whither Mankind," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" (Leslie Howard), "Sandara of the River" (Edgar Wallace story), and "The Private Life of Don Juan" (Douglas Fairbanks).

For each of these pictures contracts have been secured with over 5,000 cinemas in the United States, over 1,000 in France, 700 in Germany, 400 in Italy, and over 200 in Belgium.

Further play dates have also been secured for about 600 cinemas in South Africa, 200 in Canada, 160 in Austria, 100 in Hungary, 200 in Czechoslovakia, 300 in Spain and Portugal, 100 in Holland, over 200 in the Scandinavian countries, 100 in Poland, and 80 in Yugoslavia for each of the films mentioned.

It is revealed that this is the first occasion on which a block of British pictures has been sold before completion to so many thousands of cinemas in foreign territories.

The pictures mentioned will be screened in almost every foreign capital in their original English versions, explanatory subtitles being printed on the film in the language of the particular country showing the picture. The pictures are also "dubbed" so that the countries receive the pictures in their own language in place of the English dialogue. The four pictures mentioned will be "dubbed" in Spanish, French, German and Italian.

H. G. WELLS FILM.

John Barrymore, the famous American stage and screen actor, has been engaged for the leading part in the first original film story written by Mr. H. G. Wells.

The story, "Whither Mankind?" deals with the future in Mr. Wells' own imaginative way, and has already been in preparation for some months with "trick" camera work by Hollywood expert, in a British studio.

It is being produced by Alexander Korda for London Film Productions, and Mr. Wells is taking an active interest in its progress.

Mr. Barrymore, who arrived in London last weekend, has not appeared in a British film before, but some years ago made some scenes on the Thames Embankment when he appeared as Sherlock Holmes.

FILMLAND'S NEW RECRUIT.

Mr. Winston Churchill is writing for the screen.

He has just signed a contract with Alexander Korda's company, London Film Productions, to edit a series of films of topical interest.

The topics already selected provisionally by Mr. Churchill include: "Will Monarchies Return?" "The Rise of Japan," "Marriage Laws and Customs," "The Family," and "Gold."

They are to be presented by a special staff of experts, and Mr. Churchill's ideas as to their screen treatment are to be followed as closely as possible.

FRECKLES NOT FEASIBLE.

"Anne of Green Gables" will go to the screen minus the freckles which were one of her characteristics in the novel by L. M. Montgomery.

The decision to omit the freckles was made for the good reason that it was impossible to keep synthetic

BEAUTY CULTURE

ALTHOUGH vast sums of money are spent every year upon beauty culture, and there must be thousands and thousands of women who attend regularly at beauty parlours, yet the vast majority do not give much time or thought to make-up.

Old-fashioned women still consider it "fast" to use rouge or lipstick, to have the eyebrows plucked, and the finger-nails coloured. The modern girl, however, does these things as if they were all in the day's work, and she feels unnatural when she is not made-up.

Care of the skin and hair, the eyes, teeth, and hands, is really a duty for the woman who is well-groomed and as nice-looking as she can make herself, succeeds better in the business world than the frump; while if she is a homemaker she owes it to her family to make herself as attractive as possible.

Beauty preparations are numerous and excellent, but the old preparations used by our great-grandmothers are as valuable as ever. Milk, honey, white of egg, lemon and tomato juice, can all be used with wonderful success in the care of the skin. To counteract the cold winds of autumn, and to prevent redness, warm milk is excellent. It is well to start using it before the very cold weather sets in. For a sensitive skin, cocoa butter will smooth away roughness, and will leave the skin soft and velvety. It should be gently massaged into the skin from time to time. A good remedy for wrinkles and a sagging skin is an egg mask, for, while it acts as an astringent, it also tightens and tones up the muscles and stimulates the tissues. The white of an egg should be whisked to a stiff froth, and then applied thickly to the face at bedtime, and allowed to dry on to the skin. In the morning it should be bathed off with milk and honey lotion. A teaspoonful of honey added to the milk acts as an astringent and makes a good base for powder.

For some of the tests she made, Anne Shirley was supplied with freckles by the make-up department. They looked real enough, and were not unbecoming, but the director wanted to know who would see to it that each freckle occupied exactly the same spot each day!

COLOURED STAR FOR FILMS.

Josephine Baker, the coloured revue actress, has become a film star (says Reuter's Paris correspondent.)

She is busy making her first big film there. It has an Eastern setting, and will be called "Zonzo." When it is finished she will prepare for her debut as a comic opera star in a modern version of Offenbach's "La Creole."

NEW AIRPORT FOR LONDON

BUILDING ALONG THAMES

TRAFFIC CONTROL BY AUTOGYRO

London (Bap). One of the chief obstacles which stand in the way of the development of air traffic in this country is the difficulty of providing airports reasonably near the big cities. In a great number of cases the time saved by rapid air travel is more than offset by the time lost in transit to and from the airports at each end of a trip. So we are out to change all that.

If proposals now being considered are carried into effect the City of London will have its own airport within its own limits. The City Corporation is making a special enquiry into the feasibility of such a plan. It is suggested that there shall be erected a huge reinforced concrete platform at a considerable height along the foreshore of the Thames or above existing riverside warehouses. The originators of the plan set great store on a City site, as this would enable the Corporation to be master of a situation which is likely to grow in importance as time goes on. The view is held that the future trade and commerce of the city is largely bound up with a practical and speedy solution of the problem.

The cost, of course, would be colossal, but the Corporation of the City of London prouly has greater facilities for raising the necessary funds than any other similar body in the world.

WIRES TO DISAPPEAR.

Just at the same time as, appropriately enough, we are planning to build our airports in the air, so we are well on the way to putting our telephone wires underground.

All telephone poles in Britain will be abolished, according to plans laid down by Sir Kingsley Wood, the Postmaster-General.

So far, nine million miles of telephone wires run underground, and there is only another million or so to follow. Thousands of men are being engaged to lay a linking-up underground cable, 220 miles long, to reach Scotland in instantaneous communication with the rest of the country. As far as London is concerned the distance to the Scottish border is from 300 to 330 miles; from London to Edinburgh or Glasgow is about 400 miles. This scheme will cost $3,750,000.

Ten million dollars is to be spent on speeding up the telephone service within the next few months.

POLICE IN THE SKY.

Taking to the air again. One of the popular hymns bids us to "look upwards to the skies." The other day London did.

Millions of us, I suppose, stared into the heavens to watch the police hovering over the streets in an autogyro and frequently descending by special permission of the Air Ministry—to within 800 feet of the ground; which is far lower than the 4,000 feet minimum prescribed for ordinary flying.

The purpose of the police flight was to work out a scheme for a sort of higher control of traffic from the air.

Such is the peculiar layout of London (its streets running at all angles and in all sorts of curves and with many thoroughfares frequently converging at "circuses") that the real cause of a traffic block at one point is often to be found at some relatively remote spot. Thus it is often impossible to discover from the ground. For instance, the other day serious traffic block symptoms at Westminster had its focal point at Kington, a couple of miles away.

If the plan is found practicable, the traffic police at this or that congested spot will be enabled to receive wireless orders from autogyros overhead and so to break up jams elsewhere by judicious diversion of traffic.

FAREWELL CONCERT

SIR DAN GODFREY
RETIRES

MANY YEARS AT BOURNEMOUTH

Memorable scenes were witnessed at the Bournemouth Pavilion when Sir Dan Godfrey gave this farewell concert after forty-one years' service as conductor of the Bournemouth municipal orchestra.

His was a triumphant farewell. One thousand people had to be refused admission to the Pavilion. They had gathered there, knowing that all seats had been booked some few weeks ago, in the hope that some of the tickets would be returned.

Sir Dan throughout the concert was his imperturbable self, but at the end, when he was replying to a speech of congratulation by Sir Hugh Allen, he almost broke down as he spoke of the loyalty of the members of the orchestra, some of whom were leaving that night after forty years' service.

"I hope it will be possible," he said, "for them to be rewarded in some substantial manner."

At the conclusion of the concert Sir Dan shook hands with Mr. Bertram Lewis, the leader of the orchestra, and Mr. Montague Birch, the deputy conductor, the latter presenting him with a laurel wreath on behalf of the orchestra. A large bunch of white heather was also handed to Sir Dan, who was visibly affected by the last scenes of his farewell.

ARM IN ARM WITH SUCCESSOR.

Just afterwards, however, he was smiling again, and arm in arm with Mr. Richard Austin, his successor, whom he introduced to the audience.

"I am sure at least," said Sir Dan, "that he will maintain our musical prestige. He has the essentials for success—youth, ability, considerable experience and a charming personality."

Mr. Austin, in acknowledging the compliment, said he would endeavour, to the utmost of his ability, to maintain the wonderful reputation which Sir Dan had made for the orchestra, for himself and for Bournemouth.

Sir Hugh Allen said he was commissioned to convey to Sir Dan the warmest good wishes and sincere gratitude of many musicians, composers, conductors and performers, and also of the great musical institutions, at the head of the list being that grand old man of music, Sir Alexander Mackenzie.

They all realised, said Sir Hugh, the great debt they owed to Sir Dan Godfrey. In him the young composer always had a friend in need. His record would stand for many years, and should be a great stimulus to his successor. "I offer Sir Dan," he added, "the gratitude of all who love music and live by it."

At the conclusion the whole audience stood and sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

TRIBUTE AT DINNER.

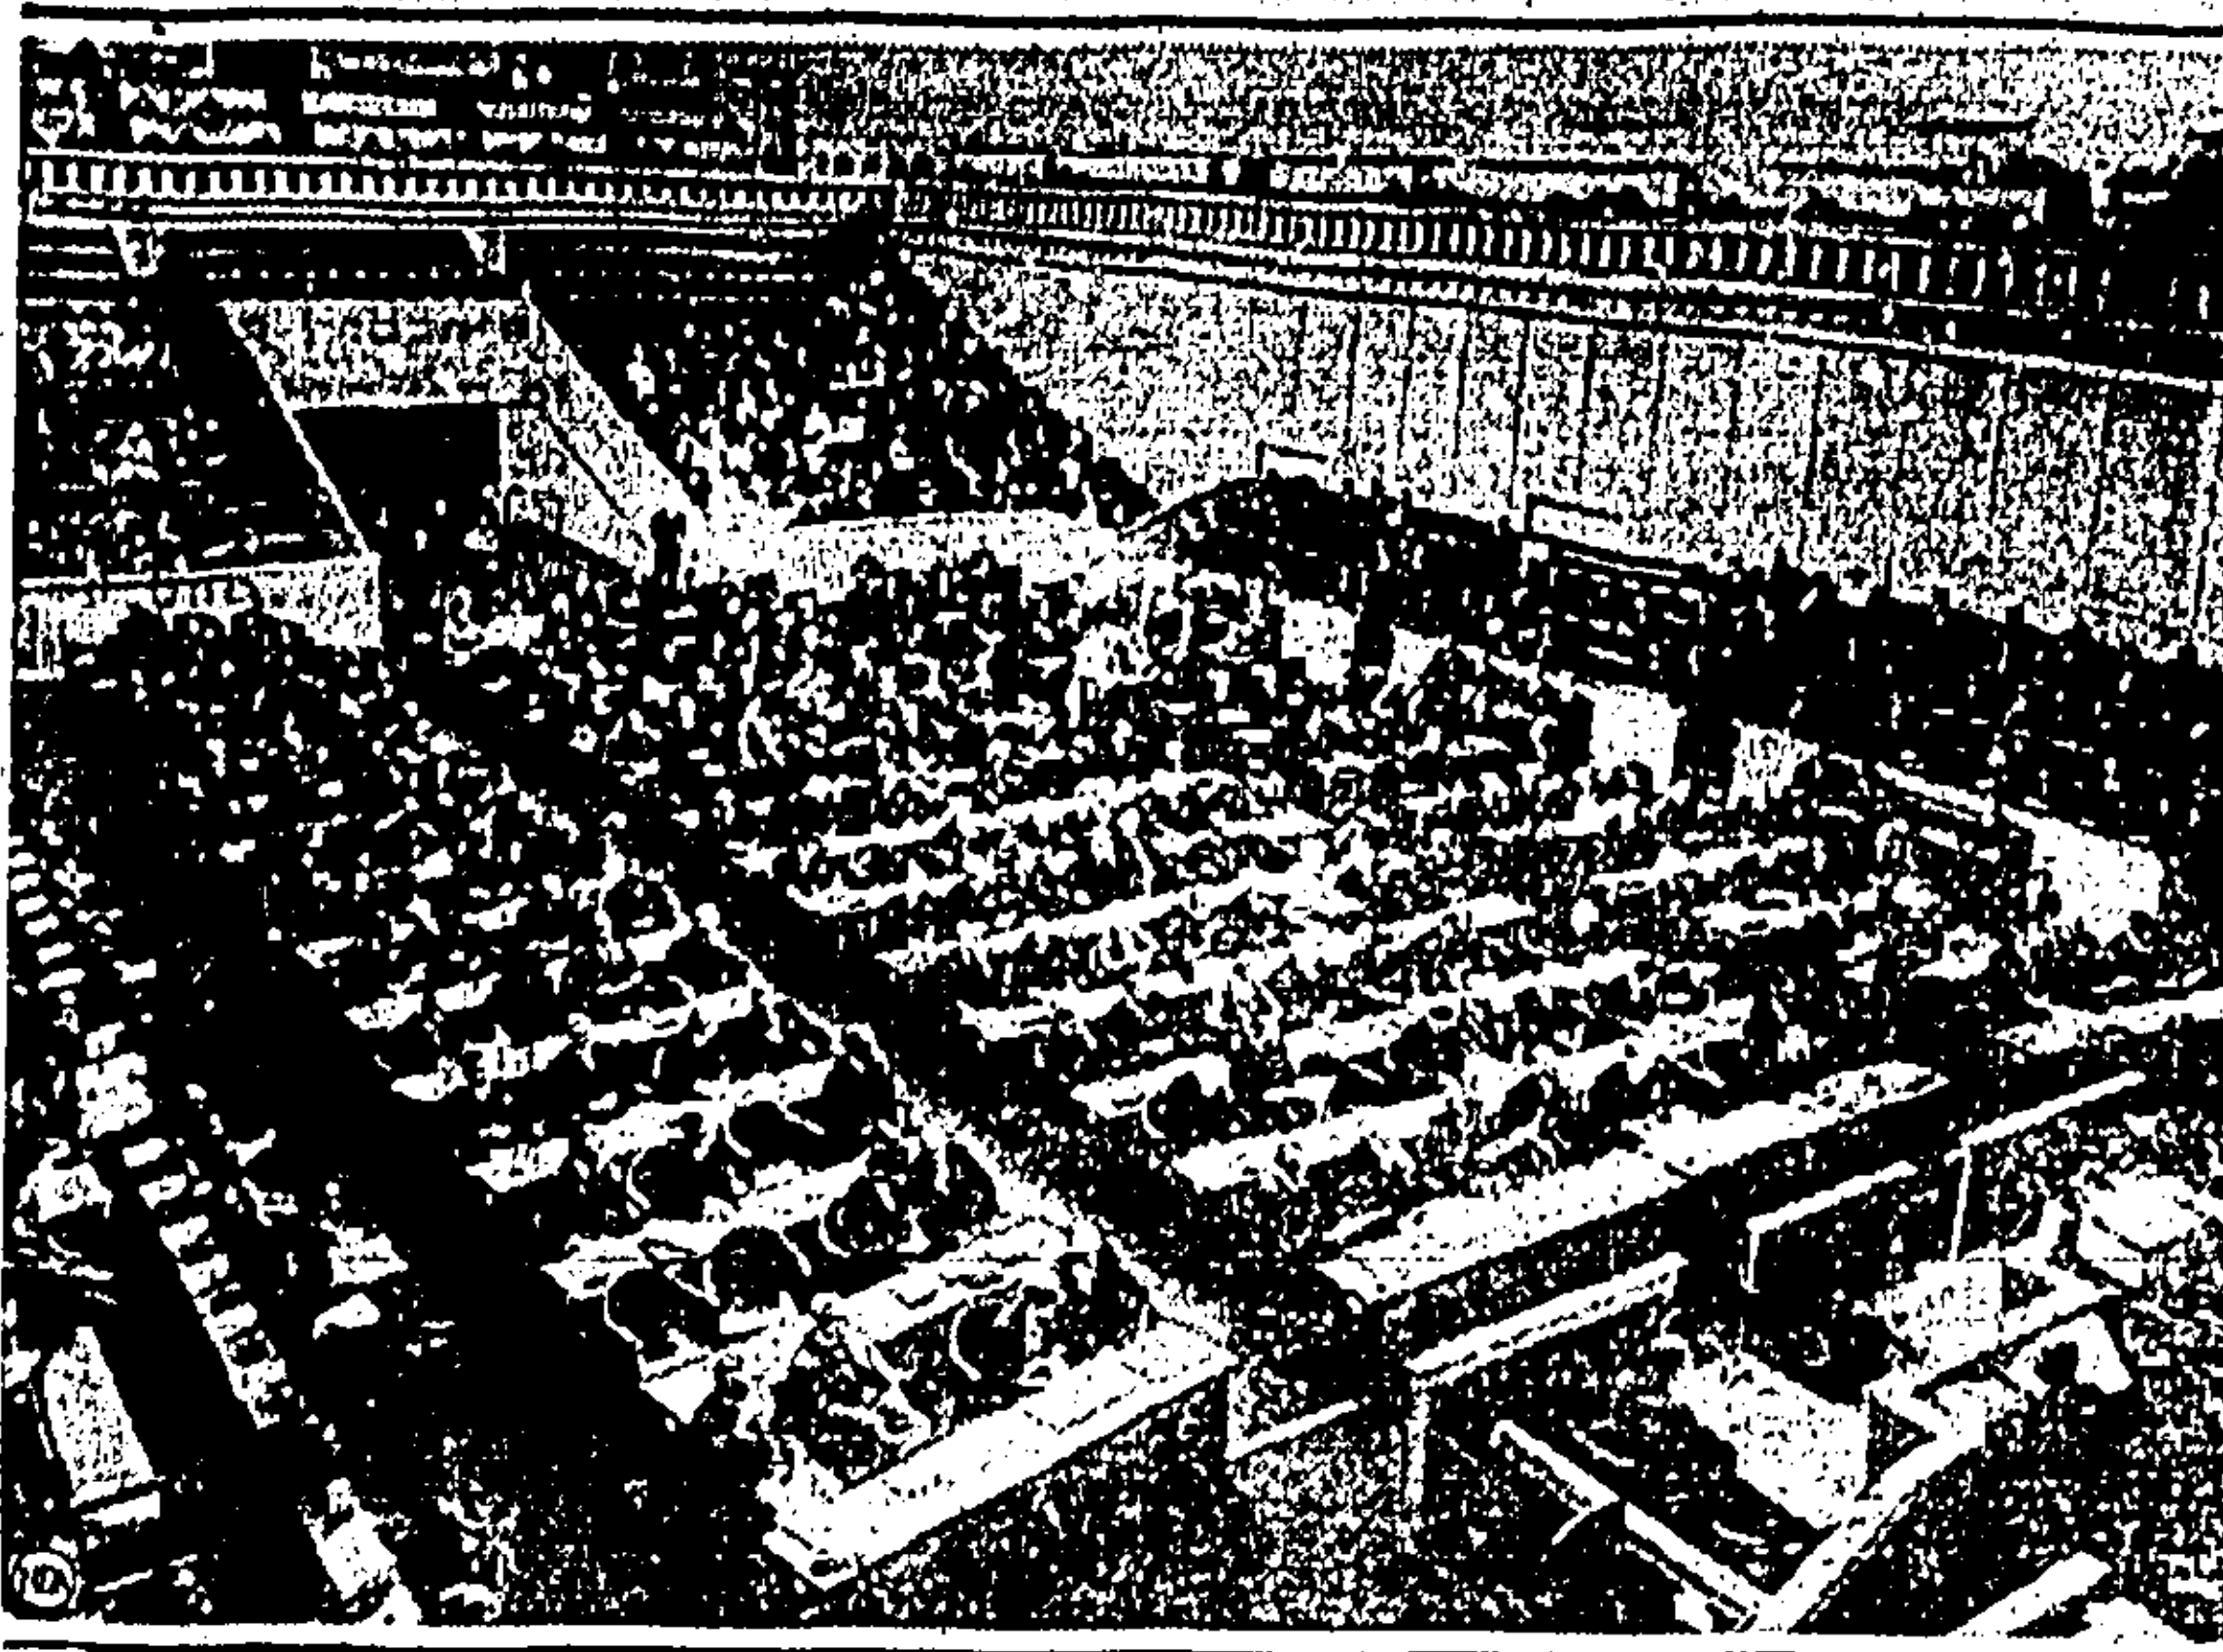

About 300 leading citizens of Bournemouth were present at the Municipal at a complimentary dinner to Sir Dan.

Proposing his health, the Mayor, Alderman J. R. Edgecombe, said it would be difficult to say how much modern British music owed to him. By giving very many British composers an opportunity at a very important time in their careers, he encouraged them when encouragement was scarce, and undoubtedly brought the ability of many now distinguished musicians to the notice at the public.

Sir Dan, in reply, referred to modern music with its new harmonic design and new orchestral effects. He said he thought the finest masterpieces of the great composers would long outlast the experimental music of to-day, which lacked the fundamental factor of understanding for 90 per cent. of listeners—melody.

With regard to the future of music at Bournemouth, he said the Corporation were determined to keep up the town's prestige in that respect, and to give Mr. Richard Austin, his successor, every possible chance to do that.

Sir Hugh Allen, proposing the toast of the County Borough of Bournemouth, said Bournemouth was a shining example of what municipalities could do for music.

SUFFOLK A SHRINE OF BRITISH GLORY

HISTORIC SPOTS IN BEAUTIFUL COUNTY OF ENGLAND

The early history of the county of Suffolk is practically the same as that of the adjoining county of Norfolk, the former being the southern, and the latter the northern, section of the Saxon kingdom of East Angles.

The county town of Ipswich, which was known in Saxon times as Gipeswic, is principally famous as being the birthplace of Cardinal Wolsey, whose father carried on business in the town as a butcher. In the pursuit of which he gained an evil reputation for selling inferior meat and giving short weight. The Salvation Army Citadel now occupies the site of the theatre in which David Garrick, the greatest of English actors, made his first professional appearance on the stage in Southern's "Oroonoko."

The attractions of the seaside town of Aldeburgh are described in "The Borough," a poem from the pen of George Crabbe, who was born in the town in 1764. In the parish church are memorials to him and to Henry Fawcett, the blind Postmaster-General, who was responsible for many postal reforms. His wife was a sister of Dame Garrett Anderson, who was at one time the Mayor of Aldeburgh, the first woman to hold that office in England and one of the earliest of British women doctors. Wilkie Collins, the novelist, wrote "No Name" while living at a house in the town known as "Sea View."

ONCE A SEAPORT.

Dunwich is now but a small village, but it was once an important seaport besides being for a time the capital of East Angles and also the seat of a bishopric, which latter was established about 650. The town suffered severely from the encroachments of the sea, in common with the rest of the East Anglian coast, and at various

POET'S GRAVE.

Edward Fitzgerald, the poet and translator of the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," spent the closing years of his life at "Little Grange," in the town of Woodbridge, and he is buried in the village church at Dunleaze, close to Breckfield House, where he was born. A rose bush from Omar's tomb in Persia was planted on the poet's grave, but it speedily withered away. In the churchyard at Southwold is the resting-place of Agnes Strickland, who wrote "The Queens of England," and who was born in the adjacent village of Keydon; while Hannington was the birthplace of Robert Bloomfield, the poet and author of "The Farmer's Boy," the scene of which is laid at Saplinton.

George Borrow, traveller and author, lived for several years on the banks of Oulton Broad, where he died in 1881; and in the vicinity of Bury St. Edmunds is Barfield Hall, the birthplace of Arthur Young, the agricultural writer, who is buried in the nearby churchyard. The villages of Kersey and Laxfield gave their names to the famous kersey and linsey-woolsey fabrics.

NAMED FOR MARTYR.

Bury St. Edmunds, the Villa Eboracae of the days of the Roman occupation, is Britain and later the capital of East Angles for a time, was named after King Edmund the Martyr, who was buried there, and whose tomb was a Mecca for pilgrims for several centuries. Henry Cockton, the author of the once popular, but now almost unknown, humorous story "Valentine Vox, the Ventriloquist," was buried in the town, and in St. Mary's Church is the tomb of Mary Tudor, the sister of Henry VIII.

On the Market Hill at Sudbury is a statue of Thomas Gainsborough, the painter, who was a native of the town, which was also the birthplace of Simon of Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, who was seized by Wat Tyler's rebels when they broke into the Tower of London, and who was hastily executed by them on Tower Hill.

The county has numerous associations with the novels of Charles Dickens. Blundeston, which was a favourite resort of Thomas Grey, the poet, is the Blunderstone which Dickens describes as the birthplace of David Copperfield; Sudbury is the "Eatonswill" of "Pickwick Papers"; "The White Horse Hotel" at Ipswich figures in the same story; and it was at "The Angel Hotel" at Bury St. Edmunds that Sam Weller first encountered Job Trotter.

DOVES TO RISE ON WAVE OF MUSIC

COLOURFUL CEREMONY AT MELBOURNE

DUKE OF GLOUCESTER TO PLAY PART

As a climax to the dedication of the Shrine of Remembrance, Melbourne, by the Duke of Gloucester on November 11, 20,000 war veterans assembled on the Shrine approaches. As the pigeons are thrown into the air by the Diggers, acting as one man, a choir of 2,000 voices will reach a crescendo note in a hymn of triumph, and will sustain it until the birds have sensed their direction and sped off on their long flights to every State in the Commonwealth.

For twelve months, members of the special committee, appointed to arrange the ceremony of dedication, cudgelled their brains for a fitting climax. In the pigeon release, which was suggested by one member and unanimously adopted, they claim to have arrived at the most spectacular climax ever arranged for a mass demonstration, and one outstanding in world history. The birds will be homing pigeons, to be supplied by homing clubs in every State of Australia.

When the Royal party emerges from the Inner Shrine, the Premier of Victoria, in the name of the people will call on the Duke of Gloucester to dedicate the State's war memorial. The first movements of the dedication will be accompanied by the choir singing a chant. As the dedication reaches its climax, the choir will begin a crescendo, and at a given signal the 20,000 pigeons will be released.

ing a speech of distinction and charm. As an orator, however, he must be classed as "lazy"! Mr. Neville Chamberlain is more popular now in the country than he has ever been, and he is a man who has always scorned theatrical effects in oratory. It is rumoured, however, that now that the national finances are in a healthier condition, the Chancellor proposes to launch out in a lighter and brighter style of speaking, and if he does this, he may change the entire political scene.

In private life Mr. Chamberlain is very genial, but he is inclined to take his national responsibilities too seriously. Most of his speeches he turns over in his mind when fishing—his favourite sport—which perhaps explains their usual brevity and clarity!

Mr. George Lansbury is a moving speaker when roused, and he invariably looks like the typical evangelistic speaker more common in the last century than now. He visibly impresses every audience he addresses, and all members of the Commons have much missed "George" since his unfortunate accident. He is at his best when speaking impromptu, and his words come almost tumbling from his lips, but all of them perfectly phrased.

said that Mr. James Maxton was the greatest orator in Parliament to-day, and certainly the well-known Clydeside M.P. has many claims to the honour. His picturesque appearance does much to enhance his success as a speaker, but undoubtedly his resonant voice, with the soft Scottish "burr," his elegant, well-chosen language, and the "fire" he can put at will into his utterances, make Mr. Maxton a great platform power. He has never been seen looking at a note when speaking. "I'm used to talking to children without notes," he is reported to have remarked in the Commons once when tackled on this. "Jimmie," of course, was for years a school teacher in Scotland. Whatever present-day orators may be, they at least have more respect for their audiences than the late Lord Salisbury. He once told a nervous young speaker a certain cure for platform fright. "When you rise up to speak," said the veteran statesman, "just take a good look at the audience and say to yourself: 'I never saw such a lot of b—fools in my life!'"

Of orators in the sense that Burke, Fox, and Gladstone were orators we have fewer, and I think that in time the florid style of speaking will disappear. The microphone is not kind to those who declaim, and the microphone is now as essential to public speaking as a platform.

CORRESPONDENCE

This Militarism

The Editor,

Hongkong Telegraph,

Sir,—I wish to express my strong disagreement with the choice of a time for the forthcoming Tattoo. It is difficult to imagine any time less suitable for such a display of military methods and for the rousing of the civilian population to admiration of things martial than the month in which it has been agreed to commemorate the deaths and sufferings of so many who in the last war offered their lives to end war. Those were the words used to induce a peace-loving people to undergo and inflict sufferings such as the human race has never collectively known before, and which it cannot face again and survive with the civilisation which makes life worth living. It is not too much to say that the choice of this time, which to so many as remember the last war is not the occasion of a holiday like the rest, will seem to many like a pointed mockery of the ideals to which so many sacrificed so much, and a breach of faith more cynical than of those who joined up in 1914 could have imagined. Even the most confirmed militarist would be sorry to think that the soldiers of the present or the civilian population on whom they must draw as before would interpret this as an earnest of how future promises to volunteers will be honoured.

It is possible that we have misconstrued the choice of the date for these events, and that the dates were selected with a view rather to preparing the public mind for the due observance of the solemnity of Armistice Day rather than for its desecration. The leaflet which advises our attendants at the Tattoo informs us that one of its objects is to show the civilian population modern military machinery in operation, and it may be that the intention is to warn us against its use rather than to inspire fervour. If that is true, it is regrettable that it was not made plainer; but we are afraid that this interpretation is over-generous. Had such been the intention, it is probably not beyond the scope of a Tattoo to show a lifelike picture of a military hospital the day after a bombardment, or the picture of the position of the defeated party at the end of an abortive attack, with a parade of mutilated men and their families and an unemployment queue to make the finale. We do not expect to see such spectacles, and their

The annual dinner dance of the Chinese Canadian Club will be held on Friday at the Hongkong Hotel Roof Garden.

In the report last week of the departure of Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe, formerly Inspector General of Police, omission was made of the presentation to Mr. Wolfe by the Indian Muslim Society. Mr. Abbas Khan, President of the Society, made the presentation, which took the form of an address in Hindustani.

A collision between two junks off Po To Island, in the early hours of yesterday morning, resulted in serious injury being received by two boatmen, Leung Yuen and Chan Leung-yu. They were removed to the Government Civil Hospital on arrival of their boat, in harbour yesterday.

absence induces us to look for the reason in another place.

There is one more aspect which must be kept in mind. We are told that the Tattoo is designed to raise money for military and local charities. We trust that the public will remember that it is shortly to be followed by Poppy Day when, in addition to the solemn remembrance of those who fell for an ideal which their successors show every sign of betraying basely, we shall subscribe to acquire our debts then contracted towards the broken survivors. We have not yet paid for the last war; when we have done so, and when we have compared what we gained with the cost and found it worth while, then it will be time enough to consider another slaughter.

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

For sheer, unadulterated fun, a whirlwind of gags, laughs and grand music, those who haven't unlimbered their faces into a smile for years are recommended to see "Shoot the Works", a fast bit of fooling which opened last night at the Queen's Theatre. This Paramount film featured Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie and his band, Dorothy Dell, Arline Judge, Allison Skipworth and Roscoe Karns in a comedy as thrilling and unexpected as a three-ring circus. It is a picture of actors and singers on the rise, and it centres on the romance of a side-show barker, Oakie, who loves a blues singer, loses her to a big shot and wins her back again. A good second romance between Roscoe Karns and Arline Judge is most novel. Karns, as a sluggishly flagpole sitter, is literally up a pole throughout most of the film, trying desperately to check on his philandering girl and win a championship besides. The film also serves to introduce Ben Bernie and his orchestra to picture fans. In a part that gives full play to his own original and breezy humour, Bernie plays the orchestra leader whose purpose in life is to settle a feud with a certain famous columnist. Music for the picture was written by the ace tune-makers of Rainger and Robin and Gordon and Revel. Wesley Gordon, whose most recent picture was "Bolero", directed from an adaptation of an original play by Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler.

"Here Comes the Groom"

TRADE MARK PROSECUTION

CHINESE BROKER CHARGED

Tong So, 33 years, a broker, of 51 Winslow Street, ground floor, appeared before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, charged with a breach of the Trade Mark Ordinance.

It was alleged that the accused had in his possession face powder, labels, wrappers and boxes to which a false trade mark had been applied, which resembled trade mark No. 6 of 1930, and was calculated to deceive.

Wong Shui, manager of the Sam Fung Firm, 163-165, Pak Tai Street, appeared as complainant, and was represented by Mr. R. H. Cole, of Messrs. G. K. Hall Bruton.

The case was adjourned to 11 a.m., on Wednesday.

were't enough for one man to bear, Haley finds his own sweetheart in the picture, trying to steal the family jewels. With this good start, the hilarious situations pile up, and over end, and the film ends with an uproarious finale.

"I Give My Love"

Karl Freund, director of "I Give My Love", the Vicki Baum screenplay which will be showing at the Central Theatre tomorrow, was the target of lead during the filming of the Universal Picture. Not bullets, but pencils—in the hands of 20 art students used in the picture. The students spent their spare time sketching members of the cast which is headed by Paul Lukas and Wynne Gibson, but Freund, who wears a dark blue beret while directing, seemed to catch their eye as most picturesque subject.

"Thirty-day Princess"

She may be a bit late in adopting the idea, but nevertheless, Sylvia Sydney, Paramount film star, whose latest picture B. P. Schulberg's "Thirty-day Princess", comes on Wednesday to the King's Theatre, has gone in for bicycling. Not because she wants to, though! It all comes under the head of work. Her entrance on the screen in this new picture is made riding a bicycle. With Cary Grant, Robert Arnold, Lucien Littlefield and Vince Barnett in the supporting roles, "Thirty-day Princess" presents Miss Sydney as a little out-of-work actress, who plays the role of a princess in order to help big bankers float a dubious loan but almost loses the love of the only man she cared for.

THE FUTURE OF LIBERALISM

The heavy reverse which the Liberal Party recently suffered in the North Lambeth by-election would appear to be a further indication of the point that Liberalism is a dying force in British politics. Or, perhaps the better way of expressing the thought would be to say that official Liberalism is doomed to extinction. The plain fact is that the great principles for which Liberalism has stood have been adopted by the Labour Party, which, by reason of its more incisive methods, has stolen the thunder from the Liberals. It is therefore the Liberal Party, rather than Liberalism itself, which is so steadily losing ground. Torn by dissensions in its ranks, and stung to fierce bellicosity by the taunts of some of its opponents, the Executive of the Liberal National Federation has, none the less, decided to make valour the better part of its discretion and is determined to attack along the widest possible front at the next General Election. Such blind, dauntless courage has not been seen since the days of Don Quixote. Every-one outside the inner councils of official Liberalism knows that the most it can hope to do, when it next seeks the support of the electorate, is to hold the few seats it has. By all accounts it will find that a hard task enough. It was ordinary commonsense, therefore, to propose, as Sir Charles Hobhouse recently did, that the party should concentrate its attention on those constituencies where it appeared to have a fair chance of success. But this does not satisfy the party wire-pullers. They are for a glorious, spectacular attack all along the line. A minimum of four hundred candidates will take the field, or so it is hoped. They will fight unaided, for they are determined to eschew entangling alliances with other parties. It is magnificent, but is not war. The local Liberal organisations will be expected to finance the great adventure. In many cases they will not find it easy to do so. Official Liberalism may have a part to play for some time to come in British politics, but it is not unfair to assume that it will be a minor part. There is no indication of an imminent revival in the fortunes of the party; nor can reasons be found why such a revival should take place. Thus the never-say-die spirit which the Federation Executive has displayed is more tribute to its determination than to its discernment.

NOTES OF THE DAY

UNREST IN SPAIN

A recent alliance—a somewhat axiomatic one—between Socialists and Communists has led to the condition of grave unrest in Spain. It is the red shirt party that is responsible for the present revolutionary outbreaks. For some months past there have been two disturbing factors at work. One is the continuance of unrest in Catalonia and the other the formation of the common front between Socialists, Anarcho-Syndicalists and Communists. The latter could hardly fail to lead to revolutionary upheaval. The Socialists as a whole have succumbed to the temptation of joining the revolutionary front. They have allied themselves with Communism, which believes that the only success in establishing the political regime in which it believes lies in an armed revolution and the installation of a dictatorship. The Government in Spain since the abandonment of monarchy for republicanism has never been secure. It has had to deal with a variety of warring factions on the political front. It promised Socialism for the country and proved unable to put it into practice. It engaged in petty persecution of Roman Catholics and Conservatives alike. Provocative talk and irritating action have been the outcome of republicanism.

MEDIAEVAL MENTALITY

There still maintains in Spain a mediaeval mentality and a spirit of unrest which will not down. Preparations for a counter revolution have never ceased since the deposition of King Alfonso, and stores of arms and ammunition have been collected in a widespread way in preparation for the day of outbreaks. The alliance between the Socialists and Communists has been the step leading to the present state of revolt. Even though the revolt may lead to the establishment of a dictatorship by the Rightist parties, it is certain that dictatorship, however devised, will raise popular passion to the boiling point. Considering the character of the last revolution in Spain and the inability to bring about ordered Government under the republican regime, it is almost certain that other revolutions must ensue before the country settles down.

A NATION OF SOLDIERS

New legislation passed in Italy provides for pre-military and post-military education. One item of the Fascist doctrine has, according to the Corriere della Sera, been translated into a practical reality by the abolition of any separation between military and civil life. In principle hereafter, from the age of eight, all Italians are soldiers. The old Spartan legend has been revived. Pre-military and post-military education is to be compulsory. In other words, pupils in the lower schools will not be admitted to their examinations, and university students will not be allowed to take their degrees if they have not followed efficiently the military courses. Moreover, for ten years after a man has been discharged from the army he must undergo the practical courses of education.

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL

There are regulations for co-ordinating the armed forces with all those institutions which contribute to the formation of the military nation. There is moral and spiritual preparation involved. Boys are to be made "passionately interested" in military life. They are to be brought frequently into contact with the armed forces of the country. They must know the military and geographical character of the land and the sea boundaries of Italy and make a comparative study of the armed forces of all the other principal States. All this is regarded in Italy as a logical development in the Fascist Revolution. The first great step was the consolidation of the nation for political, social and economic purposes. The second step is the formation of a bloc for military purposes. Italy is steadily pursuing a course designed for "higher prestige among the big nations, power, expansion and for the famous place in the sun." Premier Mussolini's policy is to make the country strong so that it can meet any and every emergency.

WHERE ARE ORATORS OF YESTERDAY?

By BERNARD BLAND

There is general agreement that modern oratory has changed greatly in manner and style since, say, the time of Gladstone.

There are some who still prefer to hear a speaker declaim rounded sentences in deep and rich tones with appropriate gestures, rather than the modern fashion of dry, matter-of-fact speeches with "emotional" carefully avoided. But there is no doubt that this is not an age which favours flamboyant orations. Mr. Winston Churchill is the best modern representative of the traditional oratorical style. Yet even he is not scoring his old triumphs with his verbal "fireworks." It is always a delight to listen to Mr. Churchill in spite of the well-known fact that he carefully prepares and rehearses all his brilliant speeches, beforehand. But do his efforts have the same effect as they might have had in more leisurely Victorian days?

While the modern British public love to hear an "old-time" style of orator, they only fully trust a man who scorns oratorical arts and tricks. The Prince of Wales is a perfect type of speaker whom the public of to-day favour most. With a pleasant cultured voice, and plain, simple sentences, the Prince makes his speech before the microphone or at any function with easy grace and instantaneous success.

To say that the Prince composes all his speeches himself would be ridiculous, but he does add to and eliminate from the official text to suit his own personal ideas. If he could rid himself of the nervousness when speaking in public which still lingers with him, the Prince could truly be described as one of the best public speakers in the world. As it is, he is regarded by the B.B.C. as an ideal "broad-caster."

When he was a boy the Prince was once told by his grandfather, King Edward, never to read his speeches when he grew up. King Edward made his first public speech at a Royal Literary Fund dinner when he was barely twenty. He made so many mistakes in reading from his written-out speech that he tore it up in disgust and continued impromptu—and it was a great success!

From that evening to the end of his long life, King Edward never read out a speech. King George, on the other hand, prefers to have a typewritten copy of any speech he is to make, and he holds it in his hand, and reads it out in a rich and resonant voice. Now and then he will lower the paper to survey his audience, and as a speaker His Majesty makes a truly regal and imposing figure.

The King takes great pains over the preparation of his speeches, and has his own opinion of what he should or should not say. When he crossed over to Belfast to open the Northern Parliament during the critical Irish Sinn Féin period, he declined to make the rather bellicose speech suggested, and instead appealed to all Irishmen to forget the unhappy past and unite for the benefit of the land they loved so well—a bold and courageous appeal which time amply vindicated.

The Queen and the Duchess of York are strangely averse from speaking in public. Her Majesty has a most musical voice and an impressive presence, but she frankly confesses that to make a speech in public is beyond her, and she blames her secluded girlhood for her incurable shyness.

It is to be hoped that the Duchess of York will make more public speeches in future than she has done in the past. She has a delightful platform personality, and is a better speaker than even her husband, the Duke of York.

A few years ago the Duke was a rather slow and hesitant speaker, but recently his delivery has greatly improved, although still liable to "break down" suddenly. The Duchess invariably prompts him when this happens, and she is never at a loss for the missing "word."

The Duke of York likes to have voluminous notes beside him, and he writes more of his own speeches than the Prince of Wales.

Prince George, although his voice is rather light, is a charming speaker in public, and is always commendably brief and to the point. The Duke of Gloucester is a typical British Army officer, and talks like one in public and private. He gives the impression—perhaps a wrong one—that public speeches bore him to hear or deliver, and he sometimes hurries over his speech at a very rapid rate.

In politics, the Premier when at his best is still a great orator. The voice is like a perfectly tuned organ, and his handsome appearance adds to the effect. Mr. MacDonald is the sole author of all his speeches, and it is said he demurs even to figures being supplied to him by his faithful secretaries; he prefers to look up the statistics himself.

When in the U.S.A. a few years ago it was unanimously agreed that the British Premier was one of the greatest orators who had ever visited America.

Lord Snowden is seldom heard in public now, greatly to the regret of all those who like to hear public speaking at its best, irrespective of party. In his old Socialist days Philip Snowden's oratory delighted huge audiences. That bell-like voice, his masterly command of the English language and all its harmony and cadences, was a joy to hear.

Snowden seldom uses a note of any kind, but he has never been known to break down or be at a loss for a word or phrase. His memorable speech when he introduced the emergency Budget in 1931 will never be forgotten by those who heard it.

In many ways Stanley Baldwin is one of the greatest oratorical mysteries of the age. His style cannot be called attractive, he has a somewhat indolent manner in speaking, and his language is seldom outstanding or picturesque. Yet there are few speakers who sway audiences more and alter opinions so much as Mr. Baldwin. How he does it is his own secret. "That man is the most astute statesman in Europe," remarked a French diplomat recently. "He has the brains to conceal that he possesses brains, and by appearing an 'ordinary person' he kills the envy of people who hate a clever man."

Mr. Baldwin is a great lover of the English language, and when he chooses to exert himself in public, he finds no difficulty in making it beyond her, and she

The Very Idea!

PEPPING UP ZBW!

Edward Kelly Gives His
Idea For A Programme

By Eddie Kelly, "Mike".

About the most uninspiring page in any newspaper is the one devoted to radio programmes. We've just been reading ZBW's programme in a morning contemporary and for a while we thought we'd got hold of a newspaper that was at least a year old.

We saw our mistake when we read that the station would broadcast the Fox Trot "Stormy Weather," because they've only had that record in stock nine months.

We hate to think of those poor people in the studio struggling every day, wondering whether it was Tuesday or Thursday they played "Gold Diggers Song," or whether the necessary margin of 48 hours had elapsed since the "Rio Rita" Selection was last broadcast, so we're going to get up a local programme as a suggestion for to-morrow.

To-day's programme from ZBW, broadcast on a wave-length of 875 gas-metres (488 silly-cycles).

7 a.m. Mourning exercises:

IMPORTATION OF TOBACCO

LOCAL ORDINANCE CRITICISED

LAWYER'S ARGUMENT

"In the first place, the Ordinance as a whole is, in my view, defective; it is not only redundant but repugnant in many cases, and I think your Worship will find the greatest difficulty in knowing where you are when circumstances arise," said Mr. Leo D'Almada, Esq., when summoned in respect of alleged unlawful discharge of tobacco were heard by Mr. E. W. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

The defendants are Messrs. Ho Thong & Co., of 48A Bonham Strand (Vestry owners, charterers or agents of the steamer Hong Peng; Captain G. M. Gregory, master of the Hong Peng and Tay Ting-swee, compradore of the Hong Peng. They are accused of allowing the discharge of 745 bales of tobacco from the Hong Peng on September 30 into a vessel or vessels not under the control of the licence of a general bonded warehouse or his servant.

Mr. J. Barrow, Assistant Superintendent of the Imports and Exports Department, prosecuted, and Mr. D'Almada appeared for all defendants.

FACTS ADMITTED.

Making his submissions, Mr. D'Almada said he would call no evidence, as the facts were more or less admitted. The Ordinance was one which was passed by the Legislature with the object of protecting the revenue of the Colony in respect of duties on tobacco. The local legislators in their wisdom had drafted the Ordinance and deliberated upon it and enacted, amongst other provisions, the section under which they were charged.

Mr. D'Almada said his clients were summoned for having unloaded into a lighter without a licence. The circumstances under which they were compelled to discharge the cargo were known, but the first ingredient of any criminal offence, as laid down in Halsbury, was that no person could be guilty of a crime unless he had committed an overt act or had made default in doing some such act—unless a wrongful intention or some other blameworthy condition of mind could be imputed in respect of such an act or default.

CONFLICT IN LAW.

Continuing, Mr. D'Almada said that in the local law the intention of the Legislature was that if a ship arrived when the office was closed, sufficient time was rightly given to send in a manifest when the office opened. Mr. Barrow had contended that what defendants should have done was to have telephoned to any of the bonded warehouses, and although they were closed they would willingly have taken delivery of the cargo. This was perfectly true, as he had found out. Section 4 of any Ordinance, however, made it imperative for the licensee of a general bonded warehouse to take delivery if requested, but Section 5 said they could not, and the sub-section to Section 5 said that no such dutiable goods could be received unless a permit was produced. Therefore, said Mr. D'Almada, if his clients had telephoned a general bonded warehouse company and if they removed the cargo, they would be committing an offence.

With regard to the question of the permit, Mr. Barrow had suggested that in view of the fact that this ship had, on three previous occasions brought in tobacco, they could have anticipated tobacco coming in on this trip. To apply for a removal permit, however, full details had to be given. In this case, the Company had received a radiogram that the ship was coming in that night, and had obtained a Sunday working permit, and under that permit had removed all the cargo on Sunday afternoon, as the ship left that same afternoon. They could not under any circumstances have anticipated tobacco, and even if they had, they would not have been able to get the permit without giving full details.

REVENUE PROTECTED.

In conclusion, Mr. D'Almada submitted that it was admitted by the prosecution that there was no intention on the part of the defendants to defraud the revenue of the Colony, and not a single bale of tobacco had been tampered with. The defendants had done all in their power to protect the revenue of the Colony, and had done so successfully, and he would therefore ask that the summonses be dismissed.

Mr. Hamilton intimated that he would give a written judgment. The case was adjourned sine die.

NEW TERRITORY MURDER

accused, had gone to the carpenter's shop to amuse themselves whilst another had gone to bed. Lam Ngo and Lau Sheung returned to the plantation later in the evening, the latter lending the way. The plantation was locked and Lau Sheung jumped across the ditch and crawled under the barbed wire, with the intention no doubt of getting a key to let his mistress in.

SHOUT FOR HELP.

When he had jumped the ditch, he heard a sound, and, looking round, a man, whom he would say was the accused, bent his mistress with a pole. The woman ran across a paddy field shouting for help, and he saw her struck again. She crawled under the fence and was struck again before she collapsed half in and half out of the water.

Lau Sheung had also shouted for help and the folk were soon on the scene, believing that an armed robbery had taken place. Mr. F. X. D'Almada, Esq., who was on the verandah of his house nearby, heard the alarm and drove to Lok Ma Chau to fetch the police. On their way to the scene, they saw accused walking away from the plantation along the main road and stopped him. He said he was walking from Sum Chun to Yuen Long, and as there did not seem to be anything suspicious about him, he was allowed to proceed.

When it was discovered, however, that a murder had been committed, a general notice was issued to other police stations and Sgt. Eskeil, of Au Tau, stationed himself on the main road. At about 11.30 p.m. he saw accused and accosted him. He accused told a similar story, but added that he had gone to Sum Chun the previous day. The sergeant examined him and found that although his outer garments were clean, his singlet and shorts were considerably mud-stained and there were splashes on his face. He was accordingly detained and charged with murder, the woman having died soon after the assault.

Sgt. Moran was then called to prove the photographs, etc., which were handed to the jury.

MEDICAL EVIDENCE.

Dr. P. F. S. Court said that he conducted a post-mortem examination on the deceased and found that whilst her interior condition was normal except for a slight congestion of the brain, there were several lacerations and bruises on the face and skull, and some on the body. The bridge of the nose was fractured, and the lip split. The cause of death was concussion combined with smothering, probably due to the fall into the water. The injuries which she had received were sufficient to cause death and were consistent with having been caused with a pole.

Cross-examined, witness said he would not say that death was solely due to concussion, as there was the element of smothering. The force used was not strong enough to fracture the skull. He agreed that the effects of concussion could be produced without much force, and that the bridge of the nose was a delicate structure.

In re-examination, witness said the murdered woman's skull was not particularly fragile and, in his opinion, considerable force was used in delivering the blow.

OTHER EVIDENCE.

F. X. D'Almada, of Messrs. D'Almada and Mason, gave evidence to the effect that on the evening of August 25, while sitting on the verandah of

UNWRITTEN LAW PUT TO TEST

CALIFORNIA HONOUR SLAYING TRIAL

HUSBAND ADMITS MURDER

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency, London, 1934. Received, October 29, 11.01 a.m.)

Woodland, Cal., Oct. 27. Judson Duke, war veteran and civic official of San Leandro, Cal., accused of first degree murder following the shooting of Lamar Hollingshead, 23, University of California sophomore and poet, goes on trial for his life here to-morrow. A jury of farmers is expected to balance the West's own "unwritten law" against the ancient decree of Moses that has been retained in the California statutes.

The California law preserves the old "eye for an eye" principle in cases of murder without extenuating circumstances attaching. The newer "law of the West" provides a death for dishonour, makes a husband prosecutor, judge and executioner if any man shall lead his wife to unfaithfulness.

Duke admits that he put his pistol in one pocket and a bundle of love letters in the other and drove to the farm where Hollingshead worked. He shot the student-poet.

This happened on July 27 last, and Duke surrendered himself to the police immediately.

Mrs. Duke wished to remain out of the case altogether. The defence has summoned her, however. It has been revealed that Mrs. Duke visited her accused husband secretly in the jail here recently but it is denied that a reconciliation has been effected.—United Press.

A friend's house in the vicinity of the plantation at about 9 p.m. he heard police whistles being blown. He immediately went to Lok Ma Chau Police Station and reported the matter. He brought Sgt. Roberts and two Chinese detectives back with him.

Sgt. Roberts deposed as to receiving a report from previous witness, and stated that on the journey back to the plantation they met a Chinese male carrying a rattan basket. He stopped the car and sent one of the detectives back to search him. They then proceeded and later met two other Chinese who made a report and conducted him to the plantation. The first Chinese was going in the direction of Lau Tau.

Chinese detective C 242 said he searched the first Chinese they met and found in his basket, some old clothing and two letters in Chinese. He questioned the man, who answered that he was going to Yuen Long from Shum Chun. When they reached the plantation he saw the body of Lam Ngo and nearby were a pair of coolie cloths and a jacket.

Sgt. A. F. Eskeil gave evidence in accordance with Counsel's statement. The case is proceeding.

THE BOOKSHELF

CONFUCIANISM AND MODERN CHINA

"Confucianism and Modern China," by Sir Reginald F. Johnson (Messrs. Victor Gollancz, Ltd., London; 8s. 6d.) is based on a series of lectures which the author delivered in Bristol University. By virtue of his lengthy residence in China and his first-hand knowledge of the subject, the author is well qualified to present a reasoned statement of Confucianism, and in this book he displays a keen sympathy with the standpoint of those Chinese who are anxious to save the cultural inheritance of their country from disintegration. He closely analyses the precepts of the Sage and discloses many popular misconceptions of the Confucian cult. Not the least interesting of his conclusions is the spiritual kinship which he sees between "The New Life Movement" and Confucianism. Loyal Confucians who wish their Master to remain what he has been for two thousand years—the Sage and supreme Teacher of the Chinese people—must, he says, act on the advice recently given to the followers of a very different teacher, Karl Marx—"disentangle" in his teaching, from what is dead or no longer appropriate, what remains alive and capable of that growth and adaptation which is the prerogative of living things. But Sir Reginald maintains that Confucianism is a living thing and doubts whether anything in its teachings is really dead. The conclusion is reached that the aims of Confucianism are still warm, and it would be an evil day for China and the whole world if they were to grow stone cold.

BEAUTY IN EXILE.

In "Chiao Chun: Beauty in Exile," by Shu Chiung (Messrs. Kelly and Walsh, Ltd., Shanghai; 5s. 0d.), the authoress, Mrs. Wu Lien-teh, presents the third of a series of romances on the four most famous historical beauties of China. This story of the tragedy of "The Brilliant Lady," deals with a character who has ever been a potent source of inspiration to all that is virtuous and lovely in woman. Obligated to marry a Tartar chieftain and to pass fifty years of her life beyond the confines of her native land, Chiao Chun preserved to her dying day the modesty, humility and spirit of self-sacrifice that marked her as one of the outstanding women of her age. She is shown in this study as pre-eminent among the celebrities of Chinese history, not because of her matchless beauty alone, but because of her steadfast character, her undying patriotism, high courage and nobility of soul. The story is told with a charm and simplicity of treatment which betokens the real artist and is a valuable contribution to the study of noted characters of a past age. The book is produced in attractive form which is heightened by the illustrations, some in charming colours, which have been carefully chosen from old paintings either in the possession of the authoress or belonging to friends interested in her work.

SLAM BIDDING.

"Slam Bidding at Contract Bridge," by Lieut.-Col. J. Grose (Messrs. George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., London; 2s.) is a little publication which should prove of great value to serious students of the game. In it, twenty hands on which slams were either made or missed in first-class duplicate matches are so arranged that each can be bid up by two persons acting as partners. This ingenious arrangement has been made possible by the inclusion, in a pocket at the end of the book, of a series of red and blue cards with four bridge hands printed on each. One person takes one of the red cards and supposes himself to be holding one of the hands detailed thereon, and the other takes the blue card containing the corresponding hand. The two persons, noting the score and the dealer, then proceed to bid their respective hands as they would in a game. Notes have been added to the comments on each hand to help players who are not already experts to understand the conventions used by the players and to acquire the art of approach bidding.

BIRDS TRAMPLED TO DEATH

MARKET DEALER CAUTIONED

Yu Yut-chor, a Western Market dealer, was cautioned by Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning on a charge of overcrowding birds in a cage. It was stated that the defendant had taken delivery of the birds, and in a cage examined by Sub-Inspector L. Mait there were 66 live birds and 16 dead, the latter having been trampled to death. The birds were brought here by ship from Kwong-chowan.

HALF AN HOUR OF BRILLIANT FOOTBALL: THEN—

SOCCER SNIPS

CLUB WORTH A POINT

NAVY WILL YET IMPROVE

(By "Veritas")

RIGHT now South China are sitting on top of the world. From their exalted perch at the head of the first division (the club's two teams sharing the honour with the same number of points) they are regarding the rest of the opposition with perfect sang froid. Neither team has yet lost a match, and although the second string have conceded a couple of drawn games, they are not perturbed, for they still remain in the position to shield their senior outfit, who have secured the maximum reward from four encounters.

THE Club did very well to hold South China "B" to a division of spoils, and the fact that if chances had been accepted they might have won, does not alter the other side of the question that if the Chinese had done likewise, THEY might have won. No A draw was the only fitting result of such a match, where defences outshone attacks, and two goalkeepers walked off the field with haloes around their heads.

BOTH teams seemed over-anxious to do their best, which accounted for periods of mediocre play. The cool work of Rodgers, Syd, Strange and Pot-Hunt were features of the Club's contribution to an interesting game, while Wong Wai-ki's goal-keeping, and Lai Sui-wing's forceful work in the attack added colour to South China's display.

AT the moment, the Navy are languishing at the foot of the league table, but methinks they will not take very long to climb out of this invidious position. They had to lose to the Borderers, because the "24th" were just those two goals better, but the sailors' play was sufficiently promising to allay any feelings of apprehension regarding the immediate future of the team. They will win several matches yet, but they need at least another fortnight before they can face the leading sides with absolute confidence.

INCIDENTALLY they will be creating no precedent by indulging in a little shooting practice. Probably one of the most unfortunate features of football is that goals count. Ask Chinese Athletic!

EAST Lancashire are beginning to justify the claims I made for them a month ago. To beat St. Joseph's by such a decisive margin as 4-1 indicates one thing: that the East Lancs. are a good team. They were better than the Saints in the following phases: ball control, footwork, understanding, plan of attack, defence, and marksmanship.

IF the Police were not so unfair to themselves they would be one of the best teams in the league. But inconsistency is their intermediate name, and consequently they can always be expected to remain in the middle of the league table from the beginning to the end of the season. THEY won their first match of the season on Saturday, and picked the Reccelo for their achievement. Well, there's courage in a thing like that, for even without A. V. Gosano, the Reccelo are not to be lightly regarded. And Reccelo returned to the team this week.

YET the Police were by far the better team. Solidity in defence and enterprise in attack went hand in hand to beat the Portuguese by the odd goal in three. The margin could have been bigger. In the words of the illustrious Charlie Chant, humbly suggest honoured inside forwards Channing and Stevens indulge in more shooting. Generous giving of ball to Johnson not always rewarded with proper success.

YESTERDAY gave me my first opportunity this season of seeing the Chinese Athletic in action. General impressions can be gathered by the adjoining report of their match with South China. In extension, however, it might be added that I think the Athletic have a team second only to South China in skill and precision.

TO play the Caroline Hill seniors at their own game, and up to a point beat them, is a pretty worthy achievement. The Athletic have proved they are capable of doing this. Furthermore it is quite obvious that their lamentable shooting failure yesterday is but a temporary phase. They rattled up ten goals the week before, and seven in their two preceding matches.

THERE is no weakness in the attack, and the inside trio are positively brilliant. The half backs are sound, with only one obvious shortcoming. The wing halves have a decided tendency to concentrate in the middle of the field, leaving the opposing wingers too much room. So far as I can see the backs need only a little more confidence in each other to form themselves into a really first class defence. Sul in goal is quite successful.

WHILE the Athletic can field this team they are bound to remain among the leaders. I think I can see them beating South China "B" at least holding the Borderers to a draw, and scoring a number of very decisive victories. Yesterday's team strikes me as being the best they have turned out for three seasons.

ATHLETIC OUGHT TO HAVE WON

Better Than South China For Most Of Match

REFEREE'S DRASTIC ACTION

(By "Veritas")

FOR 30 minutes yesterday, a huge concourse at Caroline Hill numbering some 6,000 watched with growing excitement the best display of football since South China and Borderers played their historic match last season. Then Li Tin-sang was dramatically sent off the field, and instantly the game degenerated into a series of inconclusive and ineffective raids and counter raids, Chinese Athletic doing everything but score, and South China, left so helpless as to be able to do practically nothing else but watch their opponents do everything but score.

That South China eventually won by the odd goal in three is cause for some congratulation on their part; never theless the Athletic insulted themselves by permitting such a result. They could have won two or three times over. In the parlance of the popular stands, they "jazzed round" South China. But when it came to shoot.....

They missed a penalty, but that was only one of a dozen opportunities wasted. It only needed the slightest degree of initiative and enterprise to break down the South China defence, and this was particularly emphasised in the closing stages, when for ten minutes on end the ball was never out of the homestead's half.

INTOLERABLY IRRITATING.

The object failure of the Athletic forwards in front of goal became intolerably irritating when one studied their highly polished mid-field play. Their passing was ingenious both in conception and effect, constantly leaving Leung Wing-chui and his colleagues running round in circles. But once within the penalty area the attacks flailed out.

Full credit must be given to South China for stout-hearted defending, but at the same time they were greatly aided by the Athletic, who attempted to carry their inter-passing campaigns too far and to dribble the ball into that goal. If half a dozen first time on-the-mark shots had been fired in during the last twenty minutes, I have no doubt that the result would have been reversed.

Happily one is able to recall that first time. It was a brilliant, really fine football. The teams were evenly matched, with the Athletic enjoying a slight edge in passing, and South China balancing this with their additional speed. Both attacks kept the play open, and Ho Ka-keung vied successfully with Fung King-chung in his brilliant angle passes to the wings. Once in the first half he sent out a 40 yards ground pass to Li Hung-ching which was about as perfect a piece of ball distribution as one could imagine.

LEADING PLAYERS.

Team work on both sides was excellent, and it says much for the defences that during this period only one goal was scored. Up to the time of his dismissal, Li Tin-sang was the best back on view, although one could find no fault with either Mak Chiu-han or Tsui Ah-fai the Athletic rear-guard.

Leung Chui-wing and Lai Kwok-chiu, playing at centre half for South China and the Athletic respectively, were magnificent. Leung was occasionally lured into making false tackles by the subtle passing between the Athletic's three inside forwards, but his recoveries were so well timed, and his headwork so effective, that rarely was he completely out-manoeuvred.

Lai's insistent shadowing of Fung King-chung and Ip Pak-wah very nearly caused the disintegration of this famous partnership. It was a case of them both getting rid of the ball, and getting rid of it quickly, if they were to make any ground, and save the attack from utter disruption. All of which tended to increase the speed of the exchanges and thereby to add excitement. When finally South China opened their account through Tam Kong-pak's head, the goal was no surprise, for it was plain that such persistent pressure as was being applied against both defences, must in time lead to goals.

But after that goal, there was really only one team in it so far as territorial play was concerned. The Athletic set up a series of brilliant conceived attacks, two of which culminated in Fung King-mul clearing the cross-bar with rasping drives, and others in fierce scrimmages and fine headwork by Li Tin-sang and Lau Man.

DISTASTEFUL INCIDENT.

In the course of ten minutes South China's goal morally fell at least twice, but was in actuality retrieved through the inability of Ho Ka-keung, Au Ping-ming, and Au Kam-fung to shoot. Then came the very distasteful incident which not only made an unhappy curtain to the first half, but was the signal for a general falling off in the standard of play.

A hot scrimmage on South China's goal line was abruptly stopped by the referee's whistle, and to everyone's astonishment, the official was seen taking Li Tin-sang's name and pointing his finger to the dressing room.

As far as could be seen (and I was only six yards behind the goal at the time), Li jumped on one of the Athletic forwards. It was a foul, of course, but hardly one which I expected to see receive such severe punishment.

To complete an inexplicable action, the referee, instead of awarding a penalty, which presumably the foul called for if it was sufficiently bad to deserve a player being sent off the field, penalised the Athletic for apparently fouling Wong Wing, the goalkeeper, although here again it was difficult to appreciate the decision, as Wong retained the ball, and in consequence became the natural target for the Athletic forwards.

SOUTH CHINA'S SECOND GOAL.

Tay returned in the second half, but was quite useless as he had to hobble about on the wing, and during this period South China could not be regarded as more than nine strong. Tam Kong-pak dropped back to take over Li's duties, and fulfilled them with pronounced success. The half backs also concentrated on defence, and it was this packing of the goal which upset the Athletic.

They dominated the remainder of the play, yet, thanks to blunder by Mak Chiu-han and Sul Tim-lin, found themselves another goal in arrears before the second half was very old. Mak allowed Tsui Kwai-shing too much room, and the speedy Chinese winger, now at inside right, carried the ball along to the goal-line and centred squarely. Sul, the goalkeeper shaped very badly for the ball, saw it beat him, and Ip Pak-wah had only to run in and net a yard from goal.

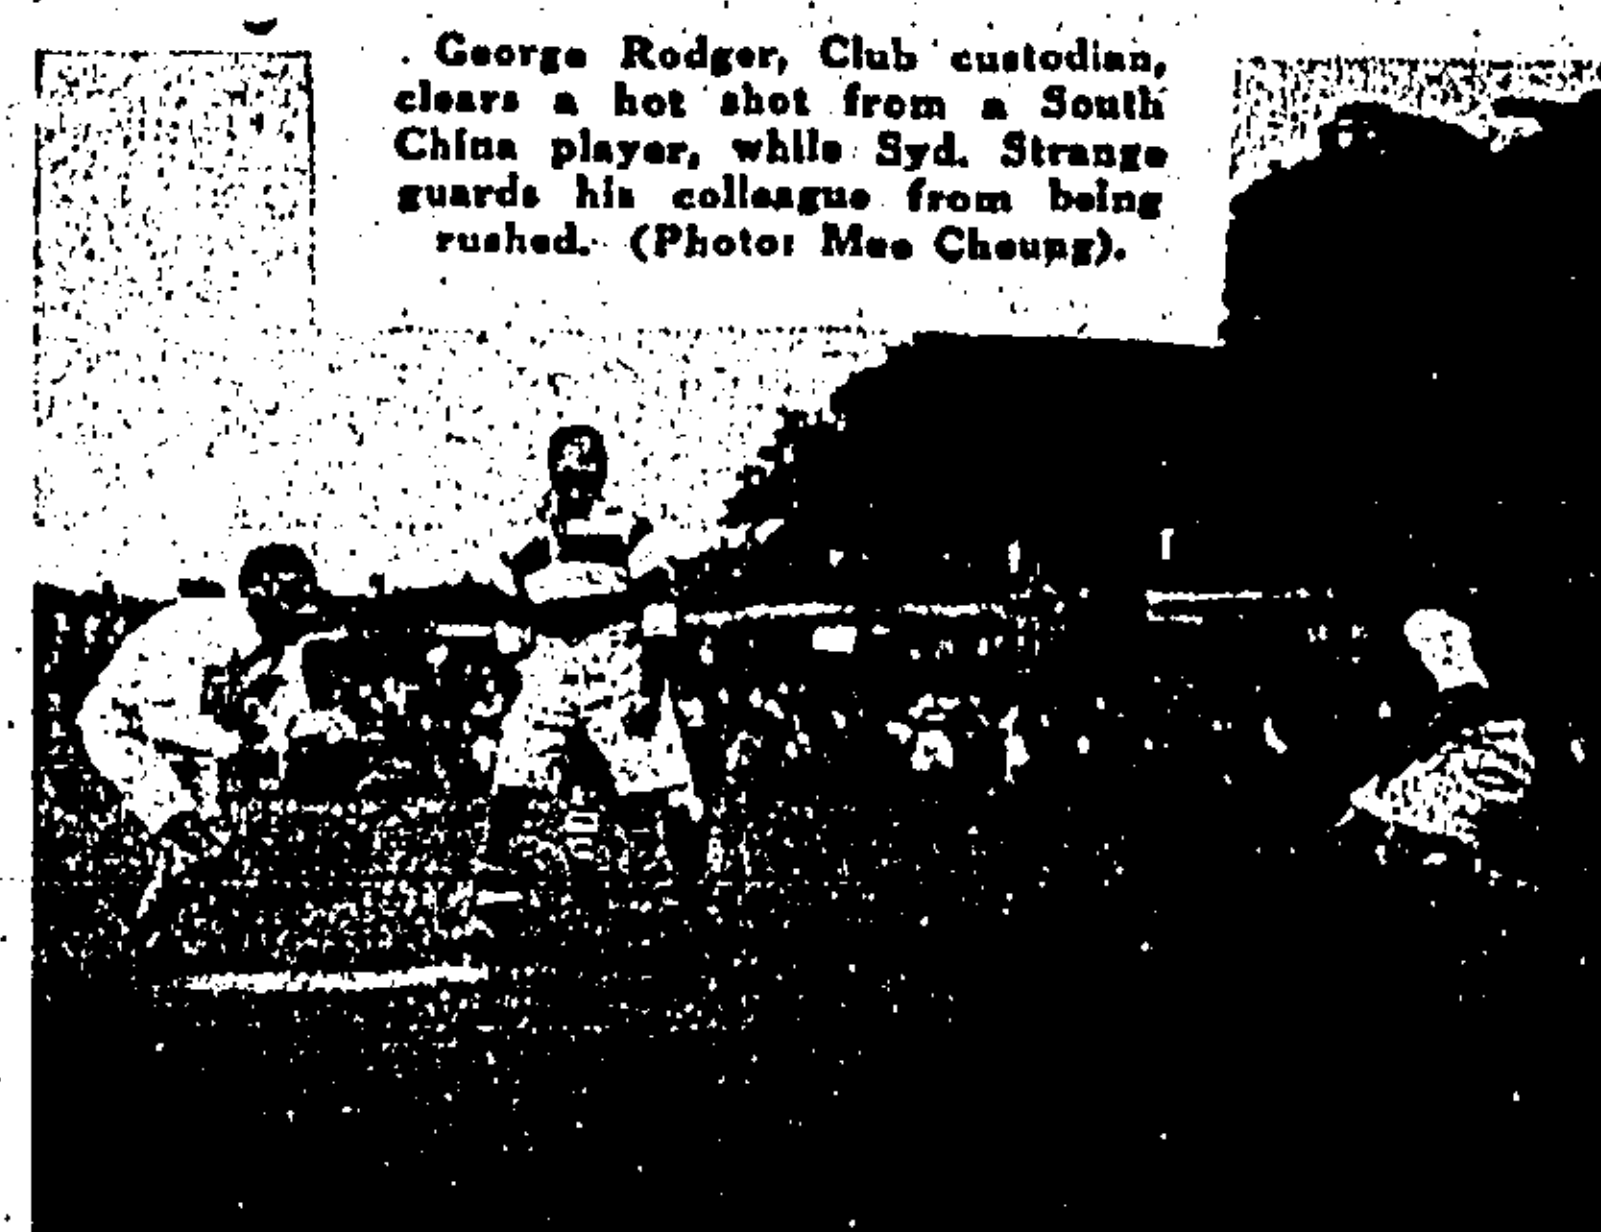

The goal stung the Athletic into combined endeavour, but most of this was accomplished between the halfway line and the penalty area. It allowed them to indulge in pattern-weaving, but nothing came of such tactics. Finally, when Au Kam-fung, entrusted with a penalty, sent high over the bar, one felt that the last thing the Athletic wanted to do was to score.

Au Kam-fung eventually found the net, and right to the end South China were desperately defending. But by this time the football was all rather unimpressive.

THE upshot of the week-end results was that only seven teams in the three divisions remain unbeaten. Three of them figure in the first division and three in the second. The two South China teams and the Club enjoy this distinction among the seniors, Lincolns, Royal Artillery and South China in the second division, and the Air Force in the third.

Vines Compares Professional And Amateur Tennis

Back in his home town after his first season as a professional, Ellsworth Vines declared playing pro tennis is a "hard life." "Professional tennis is much harder than the amateur game because one has to play almost every night and in different towns on unfamiliar courts," the former national champion said. When asked if amateur tennis did not have certain advantages over the professional game, he replied, "None, after looking at my bank book." The "Bunny" Crown City youth, pleased with the financial returns of his several months with the "Ellen Tours," refused to reveal how much he has earned. However, he has been reported to have made $45,000 thus far from the "Cash and Carry" tournaments. Vines denied that professional tennis is hitting the downward now because the novelty of the sport has worn off. He pointed out that crowds of 2,500 and more were not unusual in large cities throughout the nation at the matches. Addition of new stars graduated from amateur ranks and importation of European professionals will keep interest in the pro sport as keen as it has been this season, Vines declared. Vines will remain here until late in October, when he will travel to New York for the National professional tennis championships. A few weeks before he departs for the East he will resume intensive practice.

REPORTS have it that A. V. Gosano will not be donning his studied boots again this season. I hope the belief is ill-founded. Local football without the inimitable "A. V." is like a loaf of bread without yeast. Besides the Interport is coming, and we are not overstocked with eligible centre-forwards.

Bright Cricket Last Saturday

With most of the wickets playing easily, scoring was fairly high in local cricket during the week-end, nevertheless of the five league matches played, only two were left drawn.

Alec Pearce and Owen-Hughes ran into batting form for the Club against Civil Services in the only first division game, but dogged batting by Perry, Jarrow, Wood and Baker allowed the government servants to earn a draw. G. R. Wynne, recognised as the Sam Issues of Hongkong cricket, contributed another hurricane knock for the Police against the University, and won the match for the officers in spectacular fashion.

K.C.C. COLLAPSE.

A remarkable game was seen at the K.C.C., where the second string lost to the R.A.M.C. by four runs. With the ball kicking awkwardly, batsmen were constantly at fault in timing, and Trimble, taking advantage of this, bowled magnificently after an indifferent start, to capture 7 wickets for 37 runs.

After dismissing the Medicals for 89, of which Major Bonavia hit up 41, the K.C.C., put themselves well on the road to victory by scoring 40 for the first wicket. With half the side out the home team still only needed some 20 runs to win, but the star batsmen offered no resistance, and when Mulcahy left to a very doubtful lb.w. decision, the defeat of the K.C.C. was assured.

Bonavia took a brilliant one-handed catch in the slips to dismiss Jones, while F. E. Lawrence also brought off two smart slip catches for the K.C.C.

Leading performances in the league were:

New York.
Wilmer Allison, the Texan who is certain to get the American No. 1 tennis ranking this year on the strength of his sensational play at Forest Hills, has put himself on record as saying he wants no further part of the Davis Cup business, but there is already a movement on foot to make him the playing captain of the 1935 team.

The captaincy, involving a great deal of judgment and organizing ability, has been a bone of contention now ever since the days of the Tilden-Johnson team, which didn't need a captain as far as tennis is concerned, but who was supreme on the international courts.

Bernon Prentice, a pleasant New York business man who handles tennis affairs for the Seabright club as a hobby, retired under more or less fire after captaining the 1933 team. He was succeeded by Dick Williams, a former Davis Cup star himself, but the defeat of the latest American campaign abroad has stirred up reports that all was not as serene as it should have been with our lads abroad.

ADMIRABLE DOUBLES CHOICE.

"There's no use in stating the reasons for the failure of Prentice and Williams," writes George Carpent in the Boston Transcript, giving the players a hint of the criticism on the disaffection during the last few years. "They didn't bring the team to the proper pitch for the vital test because they simply didn't have the gumption to carry through their assignment in a manner that would get the desired results."

Allison, it was once again to step out, undoubtedly will be strongly considered. The Texan has the advantage of experience and knowledge of current Davis Cup conditions. He might not be a good choice for the singles in 1935, despite his superb performance at home after a fruitless trip abroad at the call of the Williams, but he certainly would fit in well as a doubles mate for George Lott if it develops that Sidney Wood and Lester Stoen can be built up again for the individual assignments.

ST. ANDREW'S LADIES
SETS OF FORWARDSH.M.S. KEPPEL LOSE FAST GAME
TO THE SAINTS

The St. Andrew's Club Ladies, runners-up in the Caer Clark Cup hockey competition for the past five years, defeated the Club de Recreio Ladies by three goals to one in their first Cup match played on the Marina ground on Saturday afternoon. The shooting of both forward lines was erratic.

At the interval, the Saints led by two goals to one, M. Woolley netting both goals, while C. Botelho scored for the Portuguese team. Early in the second half, P. Gittins, playing at inside-left, noticed the Saints' third point.

E. Xavier, centre-half, M. Basto and C. Botelho were the outstanding players for the Recreio. M. Berrux, J. Wong and I. L. Woolley, the Saints' intermediate line, formed the crux of their defence strength. G. Kroustakaya, a newcomer to the forward line, gave an impressive display.

The teams lined up as follows: St. Andrew's Ladies: Mrs. R. Rose, Miss G. White, E. Landolt, I. Woolley, J. Wong, Mrs. M. Berrux, Misses P. Wong, G. Kroustakaya, P. Gittins and M. Churn.

Recreio Ladies: Misses G. Rosa, M. Basto, C. Osmund, L. Silva-Netto, E. Xavier, E. Rozario, M. Remedios, A. Alves, C. Silva, B. Remedios and C. Botelho.

RECREIO TEAM.

The following have been selected to represent the Club de Recreio against the Kowloon Indians on today:—H. Britto, A. A. dos Remedios and Dr. A. Rodriguez; J. Gonsalves, A. A. Azevedo, A. A. Azevedo, G. Guterres, H. Alves, A. Gossano, N. Beltrao and B. Gossano.

MAMAK TOURNAMENT

St. Andrew's Beat H.M.S.
Keppel In Fast Game

A fast and gruelling hockey match in the Mamak Tournament was witnessed on the Police Training School ground yesterday afternoon, when St. Andrew's Club defeated H.M.S. Keppel by five goals to three, after being three goals to one in arrears at the interval.

Mis-hitting on the part of the Saints' defenders let the sullen through and they obtained their first goal early on through Lieut. St. Clair-Ford. Shortly after, Smith, accepting a good wing pass, found the net. After the left wing, score the third goal, Wong, in goal, kicking.

The Saints retaliated, but their forward could not penetrate the goal when in the scoring region. Guest did not make the most of a penalty bully awarded the Saints for a foul by one of the Keppel defenders.

R. Carroll, who was doing good work on the left wing, eventually scored for the Saints before half-time.

In the second half, the Saints attacked continuously and Carroll found the net to score the second goal. E. F. Fincher netted the equaliser and towards the end, Fincher, captain of the Saints, the lead as the result of a penalty bully caused by a Keppel defender kicking the ball in the dec.

Before the end Fincher completed his hat-trick and made the Saints' victory certain.

The Keppel kept the Saints' defence on the move in the closing stages of the game, but their defence was too strong to prevent many promising attacks from bearing fruit.

K.I.T.C. DEFEAT SIGNALS.

Leading 4-0 at one stage of the game, the Kowloon Indian Tennis Club just managed to snatch two points from the Royal Corps of Signals by the odd goal in seven in a Mamak Tournament match played on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon.

Gurbachan Singh, formerly of the Radio, and who is this season playing for the Kowloon Indians, scored their first two goals within a few minutes. Hassan and Noronha brought the total to four. Before half-time was reached Whitehead noted for the Signals.

In the second half, the Signals held the Indians very well, and obtained two more goals through Whitehead. They were unlucky not to draw.

METER READER CHARGED

THEFT OF MONEY NOT PROVED

Remarking that he would not convict on such doubtful evidence, Mr. E. W. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, discharged Leung King-chau, a meter reader employed by the Gas Company, who was charged with the theft of $2.36, the property of Chan Yan, a cook boy, at No. 92 Bonham Road.

Sub-Inspector Fender, prosecuting, said defendant visited No. 92 Bonham Road to read the meter, and went into the kitchen and extracted the money from the complainant's jacket pocket.

Evidence was given by Man Chung, a house coolie, who said that he heard a door bang. On going into the kitchen he heard the chink of money, and saw defendant in the act of putting something into his pocket, making for the door. The complainant told him he had had $4.38 in his jacket pocket, and asked him to see whether the money was there. He examined the jacket and found $2.07. They then asked defendant whether he had taken any money. Defendant did not admit the theft, but produced $2.36.

Complainant said he asked Man Chung to examine the jacket pocket while he watched the defendant. He accused the defendant of taking the money, and threatened to take defendant before his mistress. Defendant then produced the money.

Defendant's story was that he could not get into the basement as the door was locked, and the gardener had told him to get in by way of the kitchen. After examining the meter, he was accused by the complainant and the other witness, who seized him by his collar and struck him. In order to avoid being struck, he offered them the money, which was his own.

The case was dismissed.

OBSTRUCTION CASE DECISION

Public Rights In A "Private Street"

A written review of a case in which the Chinese owner of a shop at No. 19 Wing Shing Street was summoned by the police for causing an obstruction on the footpath, with ten full baskets of eggs up against the door of the shop itself, was read by Mr. Q. A. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning.

Mr. F. X. D'Almada, son, appeared for the defence.

The Magistrate's review was in part as follows:

"It has been urged by the defence that as the street is privately owned, the Ordinance does not apply to obstructions by the private owners and their successors or assigns. For the sole purpose of analogy I will refer to the general law on highways. From this it will be seen that the trend of decided cases is to restrict the user of a highway by both the public and adjoining owners to a right of free and unobstructed passing and re-passing."

"It has, however, in the case before me, been urged by the defence that the analogy of the law as to highways in England does not apply in that Wing Shing Street is, by grant from the Crown, a private street. The public therefore cannot obtain the right to its use as a highway by prescription, which is based on a presumed grant."

RIGHT NOT RESERVED.

"With reference to the contention, I may observe that there is no evidence before me as to whether, prior to the grant in 1862, there was or was not any antecedent user by the public of this street as a highway (Heming and Burley 1852 Exch. 187), but, on the other hand, there is no evidence that the public have been excluded, by the grant or otherwise, from using the street as a thoroughfare, and I therefore cannot find that the right of way was reserved exclusively to the grantee."

"In this case, the defence has submitted that no permission is necessary, since a right to

YOUNG SNATCHER CAUGHT

PRISON AND BIRCH SENTENCE

Ng Kam-chuen, 18 years old, unemployed, was charged before Mr. E. W. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, with snatching a handbag from a young girl, Lau Wai-long, 13 years of age, of No. 7 Bute Street, first floor.

Sub-Inspector Poyntz stated that complainant was walking along Taiipo Road with her sister, at 3.30 p.m., on Saturday, when defendant came up behind her and snatched the bag, which contained $2.60. A detective chased and caught the defendant.

"What do you mean by stealing from a small girl like her?" said His Worship. You will take six months with twelve strokes of the birch for that."

Defendant had been in Hong-kong for 12 years.

obstruct is implicit in the grant, the prerogative of the Crown being exercised in reserving the right of way to the grantee. It is further submitted that any restriction of this right is a derogation from the grant, and that in so far as the Ordinance, if applied, interferes with the private owners' quiet enjoyment of their rights, it is ultra vires. If it is admitted that the Crown's prerogative is involved, it is urged that it cannot be overruled except by express words.

FINE CONFIRMED.

"The wording of the Ordinance is, in my opinion, sufficiently explicit to exclude the assumption that the owners of the street have any more right than the general members of the public to obstruct either the pavements or the road."

"I therefore hold that there was, in this case, sufficient obstruction to justify a conviction under the Ordinance. The fine of $4 imposed cannot therefore be remitted."

Mr. D'Almada said he would first like to study the judgment before giving notice of appeal.
